

Compound sentences

Compound sentence is a sentence that contains two clauses or complete ideas that are related. These two clauses are usually connected in a compound sentence by a conjunction

Interconnected by the writing unions:
and, or, no, no, not yet, but others.

For example: Now we have different kinds of compasses , and we use them not only innavigation but in aircraft as well.

A compound sentence consists of simple, grammatically independent sentences related to each other.

without connection:

For examples: He turned the lever to the right , the motor started .

Simple sentences as part of an asyndetic compound sentence are separated from each other by a semicolon or comma.

A compound sentence consists of simple, grammatically independent sentences connected to each other:

Related allied adverbs: otherwise, however, nevertheless, yet, still, etc.

For examples: Engines must be lubricated systematically , otherwisi they may be damaged.

Thank you for attention!