The story of the first wine .

Scientists still can not say with certainty which people is the ancestor of wine . Some believe that the first wine appeared in the lands of present-day France, while others believe that in Portugal . However, the most likely version is that the first wine appeared in ancient Rome . Legends say that the wine was made by chance when a shepherd saw his sheep eating mysterious berries, from which he dared to make a drink . The drink from these berries turned out very tasty, but the shepherd had to leave, leaving it in the sun . A month later, he returned to the same place and found that this drink was still there, but after taking a sip, he realized that he had acquired those properties that were not there before
