

Lie vs. Lay

by me

Lie vs. Lay Chart

	Present	Past	Past Participle (used with helping verbs such as have)
To recline	lie, lying	lay	has/have/had lain
To put or place	lay, laying	laid	has/have/had laid something
To tell a falsehood	lie, lying	lied	has/have/had lied

source: <http://data.grammarbook.com/blog/definitions/no-lielay/>

Truly or Falsely?

1. Every afternoon we lay down and rest for an hour.
2. Luke laid on the beach and soaked up the sunshine.
3. I distinctly remember lying my keys on the kitchen counter.
4. The reports were laying on my desk this morning.
5. When Sabine comes home every afternoon, she lays her coat on the chair by the door.
6. Yesterday Juan laid on his sofa watching television for three hours.

What do you notice?

- Essential differences:
  - to lie is an intransitive verb
  - laid does not describe the act of reclining
  - to lay is a transitive verb
- Essential similarity:
  - the past tense form of to lie is lay
- Dear Abby:
  - “people lie and chickens lay”

Visuals, anyone?

- lie, lay, lain

- lay, laid, laid

- lie, lied, lied

Reference

Get It Write. (2009). Retrieved from <http://www.getitwriteonline.com/archive/051402lielay.htm>