Heinrich Himmler was born in Munich on October 7, 1900. There he participated in the failed Hitler putsch in 1923 as a member of a right-wing extremist military association. In 1925 he joined the NSDAP, served as deputy head of propaganda from 1926 to 1930, and was appointed

'Reichsführer SS' in January 1929. Himmler developed the SS into an efficient inner-party police force. His top maxim in personnel selection and management was always his racial ideas, which soon determined the spirit of the SS. In 1933 Himmler became police chief of Munich and from then on organised the Political Police in Bavaria. In April 1934, Hermann Göring appointed him deputy head of the Prussian Gestapo, of which Reinhard Heydrich became head.

Himmler was instrumental in the assassination of prominent SA members after the so-called Röhm Putsch - on June 30/July 1, 1934. Subsequently, he succeeded in having the SS separated from the SA and made into an independent organization within the NSDAP. The task of the SS now became, among other things, the organization and guarding of the concentration camps that had been built since 1933. In 1936 Himmler became Reichsführer SS and Chief of Police and was now able to merge the two security apparatuses, the state and the party. A comprehensive system of surveillance and terror was thus created.

Hermann Göring was born in Bavaria in 1893. He was a fighter pilot during World War I and rose rapidly in the NSDAP after the end of the war. Thus, he quickly became the second strong man within the party. From 1930, he was also Adolf Hitler's political advisor. After Hitler came to power, Göring initially became a Reichs minister without portfolio. This meant that for the time being he had no specific area of responsibility. He was instrumental in founding the Gestapo and, together with Heinrich Himmler, he was responsible for setting up the first concentration camps. Still in 1933, he became Prussian Prime Minister, and in May Hitler appointed him Minister of Aviation.

In 1936, Göring became commander-in-chief of the Luftwaffe. Unlike Himmler or Goebbels, Göring was not an anti-Semite, but saw the NSDAP as the party of revolution. Outwardly, he appeared to be full of life, knew how to enjoy life, appeared friendly and, so the story goes, could laugh heartily. But behind this, as with all others, there was a cruel hart in his personality. He treated the prisoners in the concentration camps brutally and ruthlessly; he, too, knew no compassion.

The Führer's Fate

For now, year now, Adolf Hitler has been saving the fortunes of the German Reich as "Führer und Reichskanzler". During this time, the already extremely popular "Führer" distinguished himself further by driving the already ruined economy of the Reich running again and thus giving many Germans back their existence. Through words like these, a kind of cult arose around Hitler, which revered him as something godlike and stood by him no matter what might happen. This "Führercomplex" quickly incorporated large parts of the German people, making their otherwise harsh Germanic spirit to greater heights bring without.

But far so many things, Hitler's life came to an end. Being the man believed "Führer und Reichskanzler" died in his official residence, the new Reich Chancellery. This news is not surprising. Hitler's health had deteriorated considerably in the last few months, which led many to suspect that he would probably die. However, very few people wanted to believe it.

Now that the "Führer" is dead and the people are in mourning, his political successors are naturally going into position. But who is to follow in Hitler's great footsteps? Who should lead the German people into a glorious future?
