The screenshot shows the website learnenglishteens.britishcouncil.org/magazine in a browser window. The page features the British Council logo and the 'LearnEnglish Teens' branding. A navigation menu includes 'Skills', 'Grammar & vocabulary', 'Exams', 'UK now', 'Study break', 'Magazine', and 'Courses'. The main content area is titled 'Magazine' and includes a sub-header: 'Our Magazine is written by young people from the UK. Each year, we select a new group of bloggers, from the British Council's language assistants, who share their experiences of learning languages and living abroad.' Below this, there are three article teasers, each with a small image and a text snippet:

- Language assistants, then and now
In 2005, the British Council published a booklet celebrating 100 years of the Language Assistants Programme.
- 'Beauty and the Beast', 'Logan' and 'A Dog's Purpose'
Over the past three weeks I have seen three new movies at the cinema: Logan, A Dog's Purpose and Beauty and the Beast.
- The Elbphilharmonie
Did you know that, in 2016, over 18 million people attended classical concerts in Germany? That's more people than those who went to main league football matches!

On the right side of the page, there is a 'COURSES' section with a button that says 'Find a face-to-face course in your country.' The browser's address bar and taskbar are also visible at the bottom of the screenshot.
