

Южнорусский тарантул

A large, brown, multi-legged arachnid, likely a tarantula, is shown against a black background. The spider has a very large, complex web structure that is illuminated from below, creating a bright, glowing effect. The spider's body is positioned at the top center of the frame, and its legs are spread out, forming a wide, irregular shape. The web structure is composed of many thin, interconnected lines that form a series of overlapping, roughly rectangular and triangular shapes. The overall appearance is that of a large, intricate web structure.
