John D. Rockefeller was born in 1839 . His father was always having fun , he didn't care about his son . John was raised by his mother. John took his first steps in business as a child.

Before the holidays, young Rockefeller was given some money for candy. But he was in no hurry to eat them. He started selling them by the piece , to his friends. There was more and more money.

John didn't finish college. Instead, he decided to go to work. After this incident, John did not work for hire. He started building his business. the rockefeller family greatly appreciates john's contribution

It was he who made them rich and successful. but the biggest value that john brought is not capital, but the "12 rules of success".
