The Kakahi Falls

- temperature
- special place

•Its temperature of water is approximately 40°C, which is a nice hot shower. The falls are considered to be a special place for Maori people, in past they were used by warriors to bathe and cleanse themselves of the blood of battle when they returned. It's believed that the waters healed their wounds faster.

The Sulphur Bath

MUD VOLCANO

- This is the only example of a mud volcano in a thermal park in New Zealand!
- The mud volcano here is really unique. It's 2 m high. It erupts every 6 weeks. It erupts hot mud, but not lava. Fortunately, it usually erupts at night. So it doesn't hurt anyone.

Geothermal Inferno

This area consists of five separate pools, which range from 70°C to 110°C with depths from 5m to 15m.

It is believed that Ruamoko the God of Volcanic Activity, watches over the thermal park and if a visitor does something detrimental to the park, then that visitor will experience some bad luck - the severity and length of how long the bad luck lasts is dependant on what was done by the visitor.

Visitors are forbidden to throw stones into the pools, as that can cause eruptions at any place of the pathway

The Medicine Lake

Its green water has been used for hundreds of years to treat aches, pains, arthritis and skin diseases.

Swimming is not allowed

Visitors can put their hands in the water to see first hand, how warm and soft the water is.

Its mud is used in beauty products
