Introduction

There are many ways of making notes. You can use:

- charts
- bullet points
- 'boxes' etc.

3 unusual but quite popular ways of making notes

The Cornell Method

Cornell University

The Cornell Method

1. Divide your paper into two columns
2. Left column: main points of the lecture, keywords, questions
3. Right column: definitions, dates, facts, examples etc.
4. Make a summary

MAIN TITLE

I make sure that all the topics on my list are covered

SUBTOPIC TWO

Use a summary para for introduction
Use abbreviations to save time
• e.g., max., min., AP, I.E., TD.

SUBTOPIC THREE

If there is a topic the professor didn't cover, I'll add another paragraph

SUBTOPIC FOUR

Optional: take time to make your notes prettier
• NOT necessary!

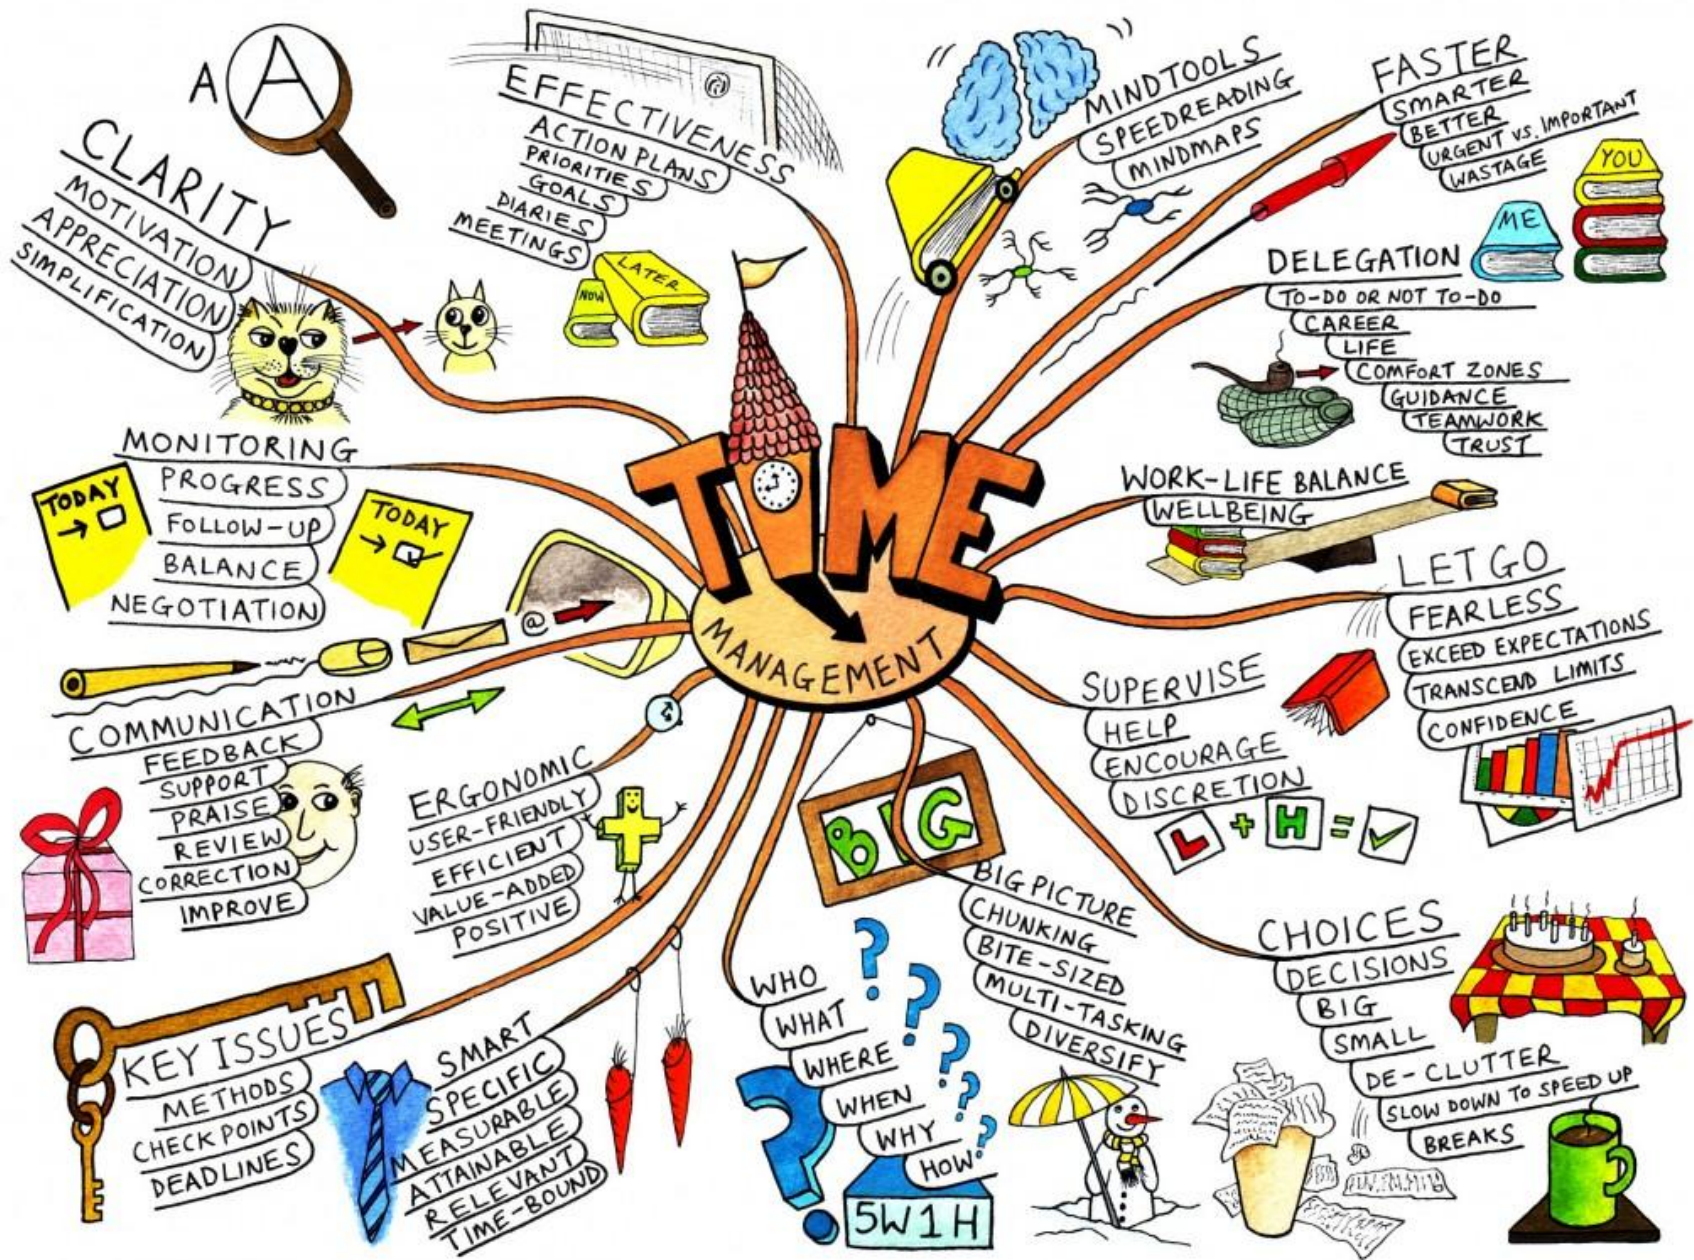

Mind-Mapping: show your creativity!

1. Put the main notion at the center of the paper
2. Build out radiantly the ideas relating to it
 - ❑ The points should be very short!

The background of the slide is a classic marbled paper pattern, featuring intricate, swirling veins of brown, tan, and grey. A solid, dark grey horizontal band runs across the middle of the image, serving as a backdrop for the title text.

The Weighing

A well to the groundwater of our strength.

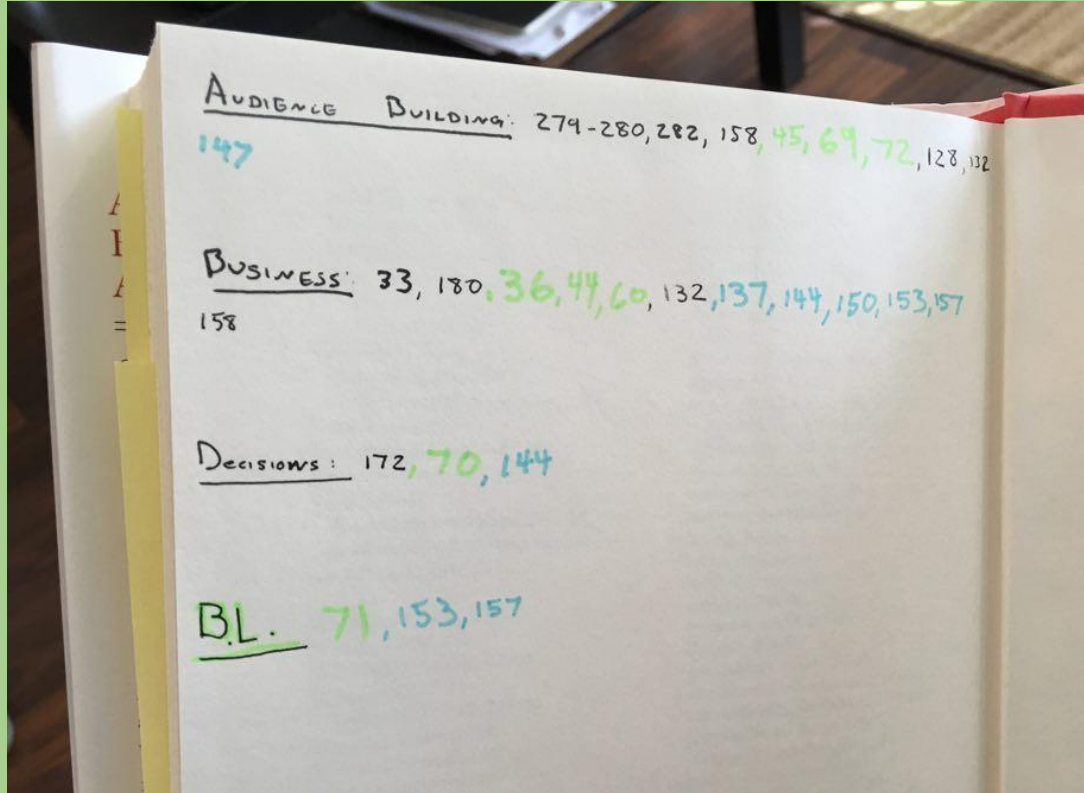

BY MARIA POPOVA

“All you have is what you are, and what you give,” Ursula K. Le Guin wrote in a philosophical novel contemplating suffering and getting to the other side of pain. “If equal affection cannot be / Let the more loving one be me,” W.H. Auden wrote in a philosophical poem contemplating the courage to love more, to give more, in the face of even the most heartbreaking and elemental disparity of passions.

Perhaps the deepest measure of our character, of our very humanity, is how much we go on giving when what we most value is taken from us — when a loved one withholds their love, when the world withdraws its mercy. That is what Jane Hirshfield — herself a rare poet with a philosopher’s eye to existence, and an ordained Buddhist — explores in her

The Maria Popova Method

1. Write down the most essential topics and ideas
2. Mark the pages on which they are described in the book you're reading
