

“GAME-PLAYING TECHNIQUES
AS A WAY
OF STAFF DEVELOPMENT
IN AN ORGANIZATION”

Alina Ishchuk

group 481

PLAN

-
- Problem statement
 - Delimitations of the study
 - Professional significance of the survey
 - Methods
 - Results anticipated
 - Conclusion

PROBLEM STATEMENT

- Importance of staff development techniques:
board games - to improve interpersonal human communication skills

- A need for a new survey:
the question - not thoroughly investigated in modern psychological science

- Personal experience:
 - real team
 - ready to support anytime
 - “big family”
 - warm atmosphere

DELIMITATIONS OF THE STUDY

- Object – staff in an organization
- Subject – changing of an ego-state of a personality and team climate (mutual understanding)

Aim

1. to understand the influence scale of board games

- on working process
- on staff relations
- on team climate

2. to define the ways of game influence on

- staff team working atmosphere
- employees working performance

3. to prove experimentally that employees regularly playing board games are sure
- to have warmer climate in the team
 - to enjoy better mutual understanding

easier and simpler further staff development

PROFESSIONAL SIGNIFICANCE

- Application in
- training courses
- teambuilding events

- Academic novelty
changes of an ego-state,
supposedly, from states “Parent” and “Adult” to the state “A free Child”

working out of individual and/or collective gamegrammes

- special type of people's emotional state –
‘children-like game emotions’:

- an ego-state of a human being of any age playing games
- removal of psychological borders
- feelings of euphoria

METHODS

- Testing:
 - before the beginning of the experiment
 - in the process
 - after its finishing

aimed to

- reveal levels of mutual understanding in a team
- assess team climate
- apply the egogramme

RESULTS ANTICIPATED

Experiment

- long-term

- conducted on three groups of people:
- who practise playing board games a lot
- who do it occasionally
- without any experience of playing board games

Emotions enable:

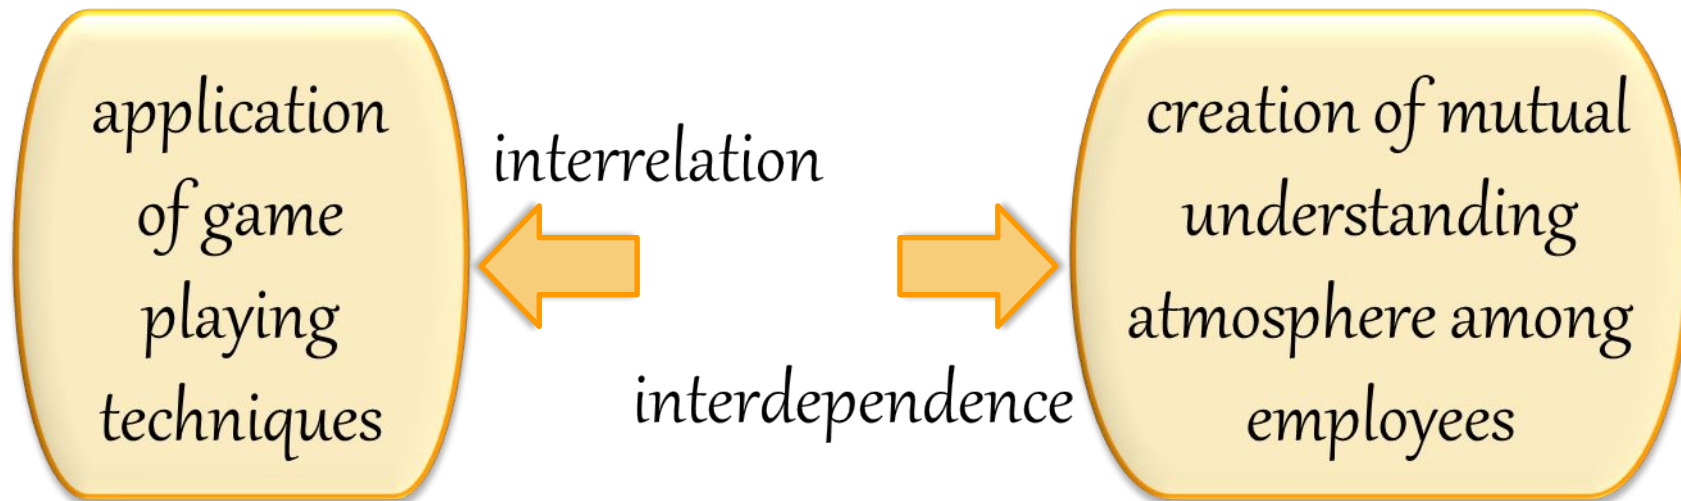

- "recognition" of each other
- disclosure of the best qualities of the personality
- sympathy, friendship and mutual understanding

- team unity
- development of communication skills (dialogue skills)

Vast area of investigation

good staff performance

Results of the survey

- in marketing
- in human resources
(personnel trainings)

Contribution to

- developmental psychology
- social psychology

First step to further research

THANK YOU
FOR YOUR LISTENING

