

The diagram illustrates the correct and incorrect ways to use the verb "have got" with the noun "bike". It features a green background with a red border. On the right side, there is a stylized pencil graphic with a red body and a yellow eraser. The text is arranged as follows:

- A large white circle on the left contains the word "I".
- A white circle in the center contains the words "have got".
- Above the "have got" circle is a white rounded rectangle containing the word "bike".
- Below the "have got" circle is a white rounded rectangle containing the words "a bike".
- Below the "a bike" rounded rectangle is another white rounded rectangle containing the words "a bikes".

The words "have got" are also faintly visible in the background of the green area.

The diagram illustrates the correct use of the article 'an' with the word 'apple'. It features a large orange rounded rectangle containing three circles and three boxes. The circles contain the words 'She', 'has', and 'got'. The boxes contain 'a apple', 'an apple', and 'an apple'. A large red and yellow pencil is on the right.

You

have got

leaves

a leaves

He has got a cat

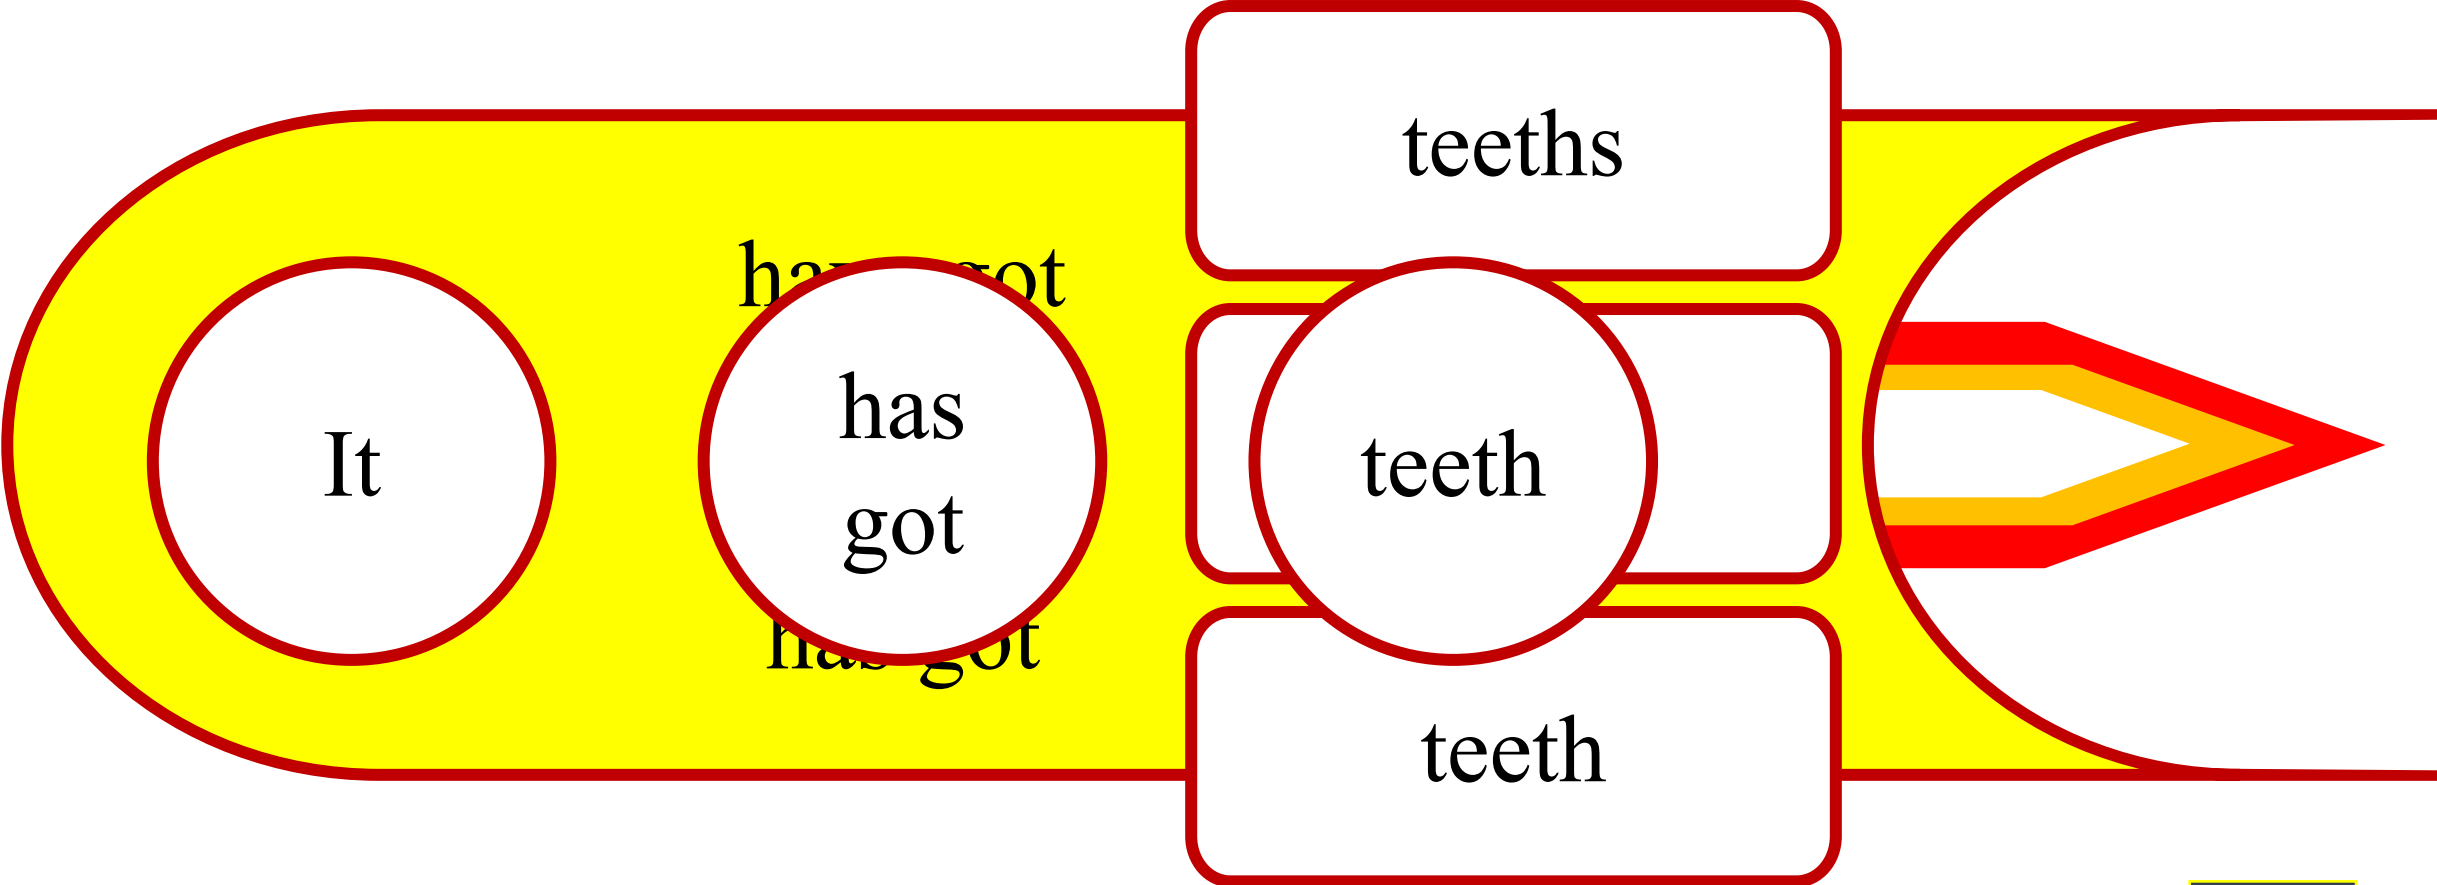

He has got a cat

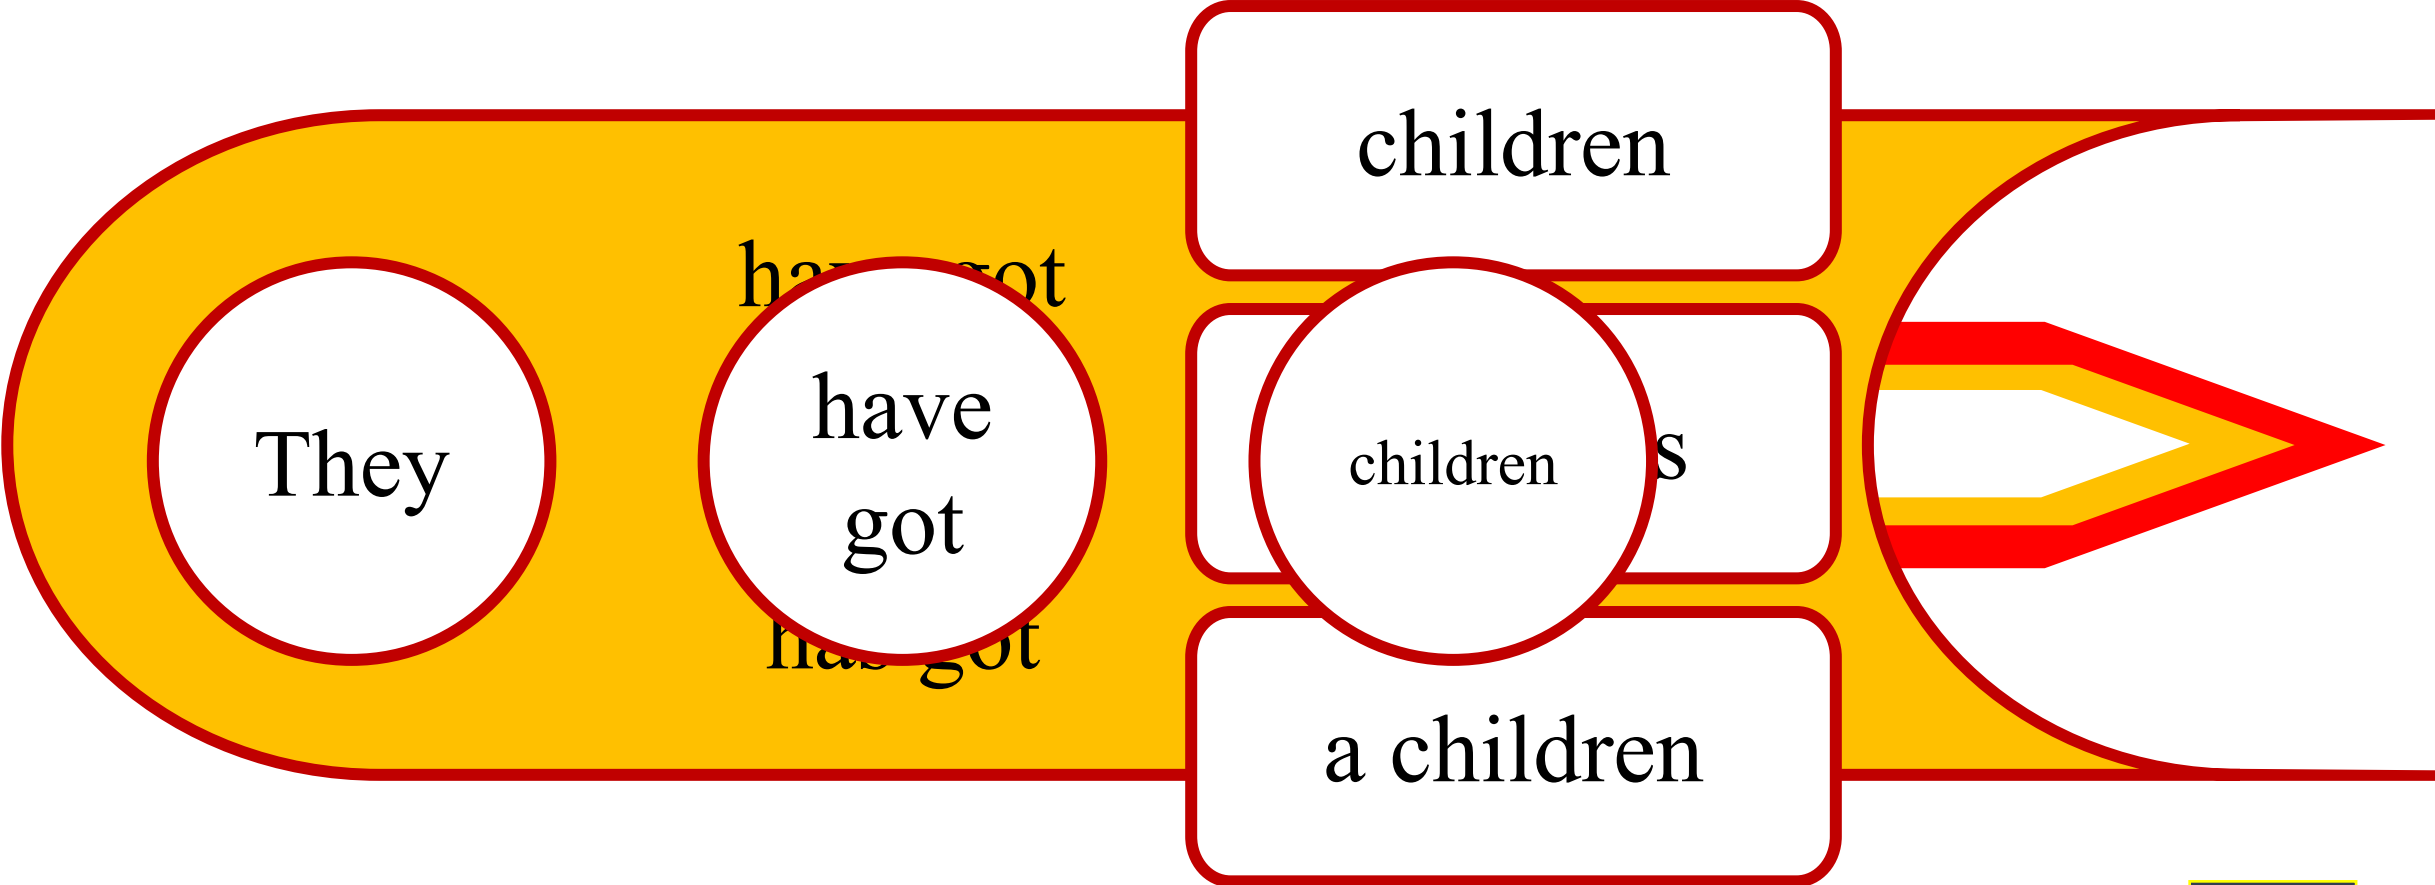

a cat

a cat

a cats

We

have got feets

feet

a feet

THUMBS UP!

superhotfile.com