

An aerial illustration of a bustling industrial city, likely in the Ural region, during the first half of the 19th century. The scene is dominated by numerous large, multi-story brick buildings with red roofs, which are factories and workshops. Several tall, dark smokestacks rise from the buildings, emitting thick plumes of black smoke that drift across the sky. The streets are wide and filled with small figures of people and horse-drawn carriages, indicating a busy urban environment. In the background, the city extends to the horizon under a cloudy, overcast sky. A small inset illustration in the bottom right corner shows a different view of a similar industrial complex.

Развитие промышленности Урала в первой половине XVIII века

УРАЛЬСКАЯ
СТАЛЬ

