

An aerial, sepia-toned illustration of a sprawling industrial city, likely in the Ural region, during the mid-19th century. The scene is dominated by numerous large, multi-story brick buildings with red roofs, many of which are factories. Numerous tall, dark chimneys rise from the buildings, emitting thick plumes of black smoke that fill the sky. The city is densely packed with structures, and there are visible streets, courtyards, and smaller buildings interspersed among the larger industrial complexes. In the foreground, there are some green-roofed buildings and a large, open area that might be a market or a public square. The overall atmosphere is one of intense industrial activity and urban expansion.

Развитие промышленности Урала в первой половине XIX века

УРАЛЬСКАЯ
СТАЛЬ

