LIFE VALUES

They say that everyone has their own values in life. But I believe that there are not many real values, and they remain unchanged for any person at any time.

Indeed, what can be more important and more expensive than health, love, true friendship, and most importantly – a loving and united family?

These gifts can not be bought for any money, if you lose them – they will not

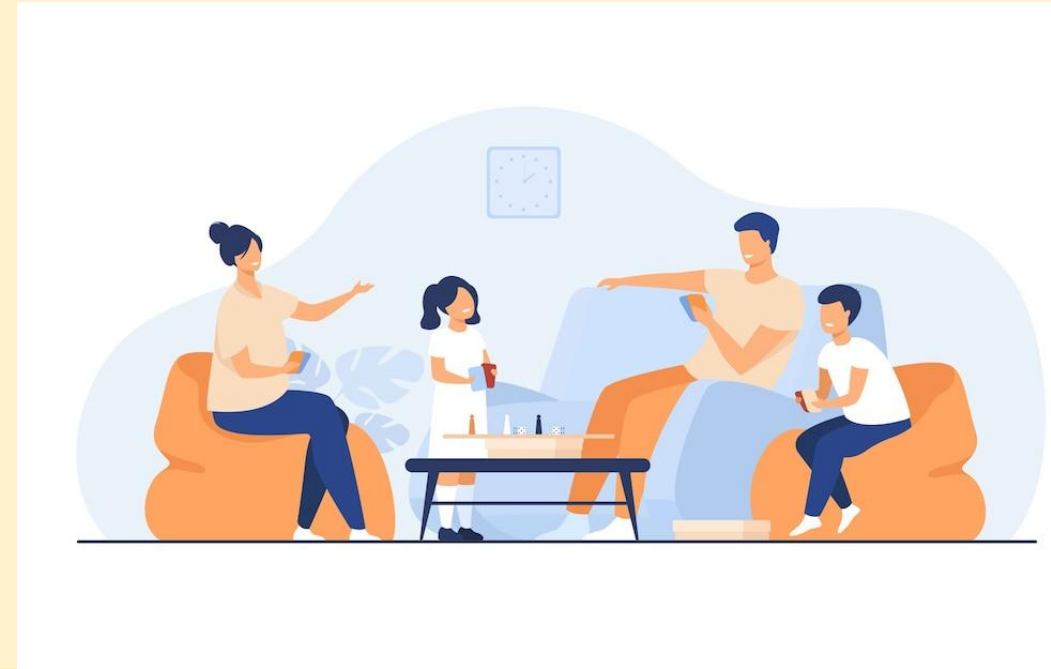

IMPORTANCE OF FAMILY

Nowadays people don't pay much attention to their families. Often they prefer a successful career, travels and much more to starting of family.

Is family still important? Can people live without it?

In my opinion, family is the most valuable thing that people have.

The love of a family is life's greatest blessing

- Mark Twain

are family

Firstly family is the first school a baby enters in this cruel world. A newborn child for the first time hears his or her first language, learns to understand and speak it. Relatives help us to take the first small steps.

Also family is responsible for quick physical and mental development of a child. It's a fact, kids who have grown up without parents, develop slower and often have problems at their future life.

- Secondly family is the most important force that assumes responsibility for character formation. Every family has a set of values that determines our behavior, gives expression to beliefs and gives meaning to our everyday life. Moreover we all inherit some qualities from our relatives.

- Whatever, we learn from our family over the years. They teach us the value of love, affection and care. Family determines to a large extent the social roles that children will perform.

the place where love
begins...

Thirdly, family provides us with tools necessary for getting a success in our life. They help us to building career. Relatives give us valuable knowledge about different careers. Also they help us with financial support.

Family is a place where you can be yourself, where you are accepted for what\which you are. This is where you are completely tension free and everyone is there to provide comfort, emotional support, and the warmth of affection and tenderness.

For me, family is more than just people I grew up with, for me family is the closest people to me, my closest friends.

I can tell my parents everything that bothers and worries me, we have such a friendly relationship with them.

Trust on the part of my parents, especially on the part of my mother, has been an important point for me all my life.

I think that our nearest people is the most important thing in our life. After all, there is nothing worse than loneliness, when no one loves you, and you do not love anyone when there is no one to take care of you, and you do not care about anyone.

People always believe that one of the most bitter things in life – is to be an orphan, and in some songs and ballads mourn the orphan's life. To my mind, we should protect our parents, because their love is priceless, and no other love can replace it.

She is not just a sister to me, she is also my closest friend, my support, my blood. Words can't describe how much I love her. She is my second half. Maybe as a child we didn't get along much, we often fought on trifles, but all this made our sisterly relationship with her only stronger.

I am grateful to her for everything, because she helped me when I thought that the whole world would collapse in front of me now, always found answers to my questions and always knew how to keep my secrets.

As you have already been able to understand, I have a fairly friendly relationship with my sister, but with my mom... they are special with her. she is still the one who understands me with half a word, will always support and will never condemn her child.

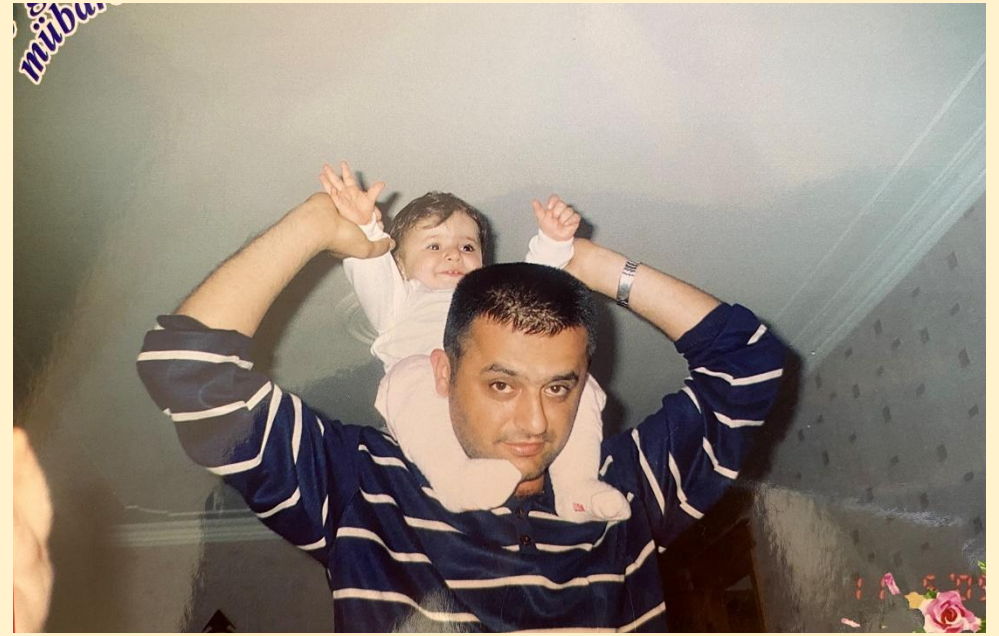

Since childhood, I have developed a trusting relationship with my mother, and this continues to this day. She witnesses all my little victories, and I try to please her every day, because my love and respect for her are limitless.

And so we got to my daddy... this man is my first hero and will remain him forever. He taught me to love myself, to give people only good and a positive mood.

He showed me what I deserve, because from birth he protected me as a princess.

Although he is many kilometers away from me now, our relationship with him has not changed in any way.

Grand-mom my

Grandma... she is the same category of grandmothers who always want to feed you. she taught me everything from how to read/write to the rules of etiquette.

She gave me a lot of memories of a happy childhood, saw my first steps, was with me on my first school day and on the day of graduation.
