Is there really an environmental problem in Australia?

In Australia, there is deforestation and people are trying to preserve them, and a large number of nature reserves are organized here. Droughts are not uncommon in Australia. Desertification also occurs on fertile land, which over time is depleted and becomes uninhabitable. So there are a lot of problems in Australia.

Geographical position

Australia is a separate continent. Australia is washed by: The Pacific Ocean, the Indian Ocean, the Arafura Sea, the Coral Sea, the Tasman Sea, the Timor Sea

Capital, places of Interest

The capital of Australia, Canberra — is a young city. The Molonglo River flows through the town. Along its banks are located the key attractions of the city: the National Gallery, the museum, the university and the State Library.

Some Interesting about country

2) Australia is the only continent in the world without an active volcano

3) Uluru (Ayers Rock) is known as the largest monolith in the world and is more than 8 km wide at its widest point.
