

Garden of Eden

By Nikita Trofimov

- A young couple - a war veteran, writer David Burne, and his wealthy wife Catherine – travel south of France and Spain, enjoying a honeymoon.
-

The wife is jealous of her husband to the Writer's robot, their relationship is deteriorating

In the fate of Burne appears another woman, Marta

David and Catherine diverge

It is a novel about the happiness that a person loses. The novel can not be called completely autobiographical, and yet the situation described in it resembles the time when

Hemingway and his first wife Hadley Richardson traveled in summer in France and Spain with Pauline Pfeiffer - the editor of the Paris edition of the magazine "Vog" , which later became the second wife of the writer.

