

Chillingham Castle

This building in Northumberland County in the north of England is the most famous haunted castle in the United Kingdom. It was built at the end of the 12th century and for a long time belonged to the Gray family and their descendants. Today, the castle is open to the public, and tourists visit it primarily because of the legends about the ghosts living here. Most often, the Blue Boy is met here. According to eyewitnesses, strange sounds and screams are often heard in the Pink Room of the castle, and then a blue glow appears, reminiscent of the silhouette of a boy. In another part of the building, the former torture room, you can find the spirit of John Sage, one of the former owners of Chillingham. They say he strangled his mistress, after which he was executed within his native walls. Another former owner of the castle who cannot leave it in any way is Lady Mary Berkeley. The spirit is said to emerge from her portrait in the Gray Room. Legend has it that Lady Mary's husband went to her sister, leaving his wife to grieve within the walls of the castle.

