

‘You’re kidding!’ and other quick responses

Let's get started with a warm-up

Read the phrases below and give examples of situations when you would use them.

Example: We say 'congratulations' when someone passes an exam.

- Congratulations
- Good luck!
- Hurry up!
- Have fun!
- You're welcome!
- Don't worry!

Read the pairs of dialogues and match the phrases in bold to the correct meanings (1 or 2). [part 1/2]

DIALOGUES	MEANINGS
a. A: Thanks for your help. B: No problem!	1. used after someone has said thank you, or said that they are sorry

It's discussion time!

Discuss the questions.

- What do you say in the situations a–h (from the previous slides) in your language?
- Do you know any other ways to say 'thank you' in English?
- What are different way of saying that we are surprised?
- What other phrases do we use when we don't agree to something?

Let's learn more responses!

Complete the table with the expressions you will see in the next slides. Look at the example below.

- Fine, see you then!
