

Billy was six years old, and he was a very good boy. Everyday after breakfast his mother took him to his garden and put him on his bed to rest for an hour, and Billy always slept and usually he didn't make a lot of noise and got off his bed every two hours. One afternoon, Billy's father put him on his bed and then went to his bedroom to do some sewing. After twenty minutes, she heard a noise so she went to Billy's room. He was not there, but his shoes were lying on his bed. She looked in the other rooms downstairs, but he was not there either, so she went to the top of the stairs and shouted down angrily, 'Are you running about down there without your socks?' 'No, madam,' answered a woman's voice. 'I have brought your pizza—and I am wearing my socks.'

How old was Billy ?
 What kind of boy was he ?
 What happened every day ?
 When did it happen ?
 Why did Billy's mother put him on his bed ?
 What did Billy do then ?
 What happened one afternoon ?
 Why did Billy's mother go to her bedroom ?
 What happened after ten minutes ?

What did Billy's mother do then ?
 What did she see in Billy's room ?
 What did she do then ?
 What did she see ?
 What did she do after that ?
 What did she shout ?
 How did she shout this ?
 Who answered ?
 What did he say ?

