Shopping in Georgia

Tourists take home handicrafts: silver jewelry and household items, home-made towels and mats - and the best Georgian food and drinks: wine, grape seed oil, churchella, cottage cheese, spices.

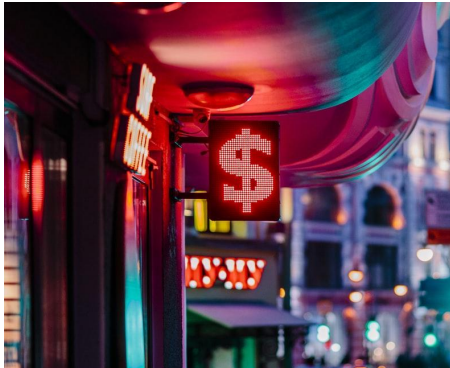

In Tbilisi shopping malls you can buy goods from all the world's brands.

Souvenir shops are spread throughout the capital, in the markets the goods are cheaper and you can haggle. The "flea market" near the House of Justice on the bank of the Kura River at the Dry Bridge is popular with tourists. Stores close around 7 pm, supermarkets are open late or around the clock, the markets have a day off - Monday.

Cash and bank cards

MasterCard and Visa bank cards are freely accepted in the capital. Local currency - lari and tetri - is better to carry at the market, in transport and in provincial towns. Banks charge a small fee when exchanging into lari.

Prices in Georgia

You can go to a restaurant without refusing anything for about 20 dollars, but if you eat modestly, ordering inexpensive khinkali, you can keep it to 5 dollars. Those who rent an apartment in the capital and plan to cook on their own, buy near the Central Station at the Desert Market, where the lowest prices for products.

Active recreation in Georgia

In the Borjomi-Bakurian region the climatic conditions are close to the alpine ones. In Bakuriani there are many trails for beginners and professionals, hikers also come here in summer. Skiers and rock climbers are welcome in Svaneti. The resort of Gudauri in the historic region of Chevi welcomes athletes from December to April. Mountain climbers train year-round in the vicinity of Kutaisi.

There are no problems with the choice of accommodation in Georgia. A room in a guest house costs from 10 dollars a day, a modest apartment can be rented for 40 dollars, for a long term rent is cheaper. Hotel room - from $20, the average price - $50. In national parks are equipped with inexpensive campsites and guest houses. In seaside areas rent apartments private individuals, ads in Russian can be found directly on the road from the beach.
