

Bavly

Bavly is a land of high mountains, rivers, pretty valleys and temperate, continental climate. My town has always attracted visitors from neighboring republics and distant countries. It was founded in 1930. We celebrated it's anniversary this year. The first oil gusher gushed out in 1936. Oil for us is the main wealth – so called “black gold”.

Bavly citizens are proud of their outstanding and world famous country men: the writers Fanis Yarullin, Tufan Minnullin, Mirgaziyan Yunis, Rafael Mustafin, composer Gans Saifullin, popular singer Vil Usmanov and many others.

An aerial photograph of a suburban neighborhood. The foreground shows a mix of residential buildings, including some larger multi-story structures and smaller houses. The middle ground is dominated by a dense cluster of houses with light-colored roofs. The background features rolling green hills with patches of trees. The overall scene is bright and sunny.

Our people say with warmth:

Welcome To Bavly!
