Presentation on "Interesting facts about the English-speaking countries"

Student Chemical - technological faculty: Gusakov A.A.

- Hello. Today I would like to tell you about some interesting facts and laws in the countries in which English is an official language. I hope you will be interested.

Introduction.

- In Austria people are not allowed to tell jokes to the lions.

Jokes – шутки

Australia.

- In Australia, if a teacher suggests a student about a bribe, the student has the right to beat him, but only by the left foot.

Bribe - взятка

Australia.

- In Canada, people with dependency on social networks, are given tickets to the Maldives for a week, so that people do not live their lives in a virtual world, and enjoy the present.

Canada.

- Every day in the United States 72 thousand square kilometers of pizza are eaten up.

USA.

- The name of this country comes from the Iroquois Indian language. "Kanata", meaning "village", "settlement".

Canada

- In New York City drivers do not turn on a red light that can not be said about the other states, including New York, where the turn on a red light is allowed.

USA

- On the streets of London it is hard to find stray animals. They are usually contained in special shelters. In general, the British are very fond of dogs on the streets of London, you can probably find all breeds of dogs, walking with their owners.

- stray - бездомный

England

- In the US Army, there are not only good salaries but and many benefits are offered to parents themselves to send their teenagers to be "turned into men." The result is usually very impressive.

USA

- Potato Chips among Americans are considered to be part of the dish - side dish, as in Russian, for example, fried potatoes.

USA

- Americans are unbelievable workaholics. If you come to the office at 6 am or you will be at work before midnight, no one will appreciate. That is how much they work.

USA

- Thank you for listening to me. That's all I wanted to tell today. I hope it was interesting.

Conclusion.