HER 'WIGGLE' BECAME A LEGEND

Millions of people throughout the world knew her just as "Marilyn." Her wiggle and her wide-eyed look became a legend in her lifetime. And in her $125,000 Hollywood bungalow, the legend ended.

TALKS on Britain's entry into the six-nation Common Market were postponed yesterday in Brussels after a 16-hour marathon session.
They will start again in the autumn but no definite date has been fixed.
This intensive discussion, closed some surprise in official circles in London. Britain's chief market negotiator, Lord Pym, had

'Multi-million' star found dead in bed

MARILYN MONROE: 'IT LOOKS LIKE SUICIDE'

From STAN MAYS and JOHN EDWARDS
New York, Sunday

MARILYN MONROE, 36-year-old Hollywood sex-symbol, was found dead in bed behind locked doors in her luxury bungalow early today.

She was clutching a white telephone, still on its hook. On her bedside table, among thirty bottles, was an empty one which had contained sleeping pills.

The star who walked with a wiggle was naked—as she always slept—and covered only by a sheet and blanket.

Tonight, as her body lay in a dusty basement at Hollywood's Westwood Village mortuary, coroner's officer Guy Hockett said: "It looks like suicide."

Los Angeles county coroner, Dr. F. Curphy, said a twelve-man "suicide team" would determine whether her death was accidental or not. The probe might take a week.

Marilyn's death was discovered in the middle of the night. The housekeeper at her Hollywood home, Mrs. Eunice Murray, woke up at 2 a.m. and saw the light on under Marilyn's door.

She tried the door and knocked, but could not rouse Marilyn. She called the star's personal physician, Dr. Ralph Greenwald, and together they broke into the room.

Stormy

Another doctor, Dr. Herman Engleberg, was called. Marilyn was dead. Doctors think she died between 2 and 3 p.m. on Saturday.

It was the end of a brilliant and stormy career which began with her famous "milk calendar" picture, and ended with her being fired from the film "Something's Got to Give" for being late on the set.

Marilyn's closest girl friend, attractive brunette Pat Newcomb, was the last person to see her alive. Pat had dinner with Marilyn at her home last night.

Later, she said: "Marilyn was so happy. She was full of high spirits." Before turning in for the night Marilyn called a "cherish" Good-night, "honey" to her bookkeeper.

Marriages

The star, whose marriages were in the multi-million-dollar bracket, had been having periodic flirtations for three years.

Her three marriages failed. In turn her husbands were politician Jim Dougherty, scientist Joe Di Maggio, and playwright Arthur Miller.

Mr. Dougherty was patrolling in a squad car in Hollywood when he caught the star. "I'm sorry," he said.

Come-back

Marilyn regarded "Something's Got to Give" as a come-back film. The fan mail had dropped from 200,000 a week to 100.

Last night stars named the world capital of the Marilyn they knew.
The LONDON FRANKIE FINGERS, who starred with her in "Let's Make Love," said: "She was the sexiest star, but no more of herself."

From director John Frankenheimer, who directed her last great film: "Marilyn was taking heavy doses of barbiturates. I dropped the film and sent her to hospital."

And Pat Lauro, director: "She could be hysterically sweet and very witty, but she was frightened. She was in a great deal of pain."

IN ITALY, Sophia Loren, 37, in bed with "Irene's" sister, Marilyn was a successful actress.
