A photograph of the Priory of Serres in France. The main subject is a large, multi-story stone building with a prominent square bell tower on the left side. The building is constructed from rough-hewn stone and has several windows, including a tall, narrow arched window on the main facade. The roof is dark and appears to be made of tiles or slate. In the foreground, there is a well-maintained garden with several raised beds. The beds contain various plants, including tall grasses, small shrubs, and some flowering plants. A series of neatly trimmed hedges runs across the middle ground, separating the garden from the building. The sky is blue with scattered white clouds. The overall scene is bright and sunny, suggesting a clear day.
