

My favourite film

Five Feet Apart

Genre: melodrama

Country: USA

Language: English

Director: Justin Baldoni

Starring: Cole Sprouse, Haley Lu Richardson

The space in which they exist dictates a cruel condition – lovers must be no closer than a meter from each other, they can not even touch. But true love knows no boundaries, and the stronger the feelings, the greater the temptation to break the rules...

Plot

Stella Grant is a patient with cystic fibrosis (CF). She meets a patient, Will Newman, who also suffers from CF. Patients with CF should keep a distance of a couple of meters from each other, as infection can be life-threatening. Will doesn't take the courses of treatment, so Stella eventually persuades him to follow it.

Will and Stella fall in love and secretly go on a first date. Then Will's birthday comes. Po, Stella's best friend and a patient with CF, arranges the whole holiday. After a while, POE dies. Heartbroken, Stella convinces Will to leave the hospital. Meanwhile, the hospital reports that Stella may finally have a lung transplant. After learning about this, Will begs Stella to return to the hospital. But Stella refuses, and then falls through the ice. Will pulls her out and, despite the risk of infection, performs CPR. Stella wakes up.

Heroes are taken back to the hospital. Stella agrees to have a lung transplant for will's sake. The transplant is successful, and will learns that Stella has not been infected. After the operation, Stella wakes up and sees will through the glass of her room. After confessing his love for her, will ask Stella to close her eyes because he can't leave if she looks at him. Stella closes her eyes and will leaves.

I advise all my friends to watch Five Feet Apart.
This is a very impressive film. In addition, it is a touching love story.

The end