Shortly after his parents divorced, he moved back to the Peterborough area, where he initially attended Adam Scott Collegiate and Vocational Institute. In 1997, Gontier, Sanderson, and Walst regrouped as "Three Days Grace".

According to Gontier, the name refers to a sense of urgency, with the question being whether someone could change something in their life if they had only three days to make a change.

Three Days Grace (2003–2005)

The self-titled album was finished in Woodstock, New York and released on July 22, 2003. To support the eponymous album, in 2003 Three Days Grace released its first single, "I Hate Everything About You". The song received heavy airplay and rapidly became a widely recognizable song, and was labelled as the band's "breakout hit".

After Barry Stock joined as lead guitarist in late 2003, Three Days Grace toured continuously and extensively for nearly two years in support of their major label debut. The album peaked at number nine on the Canadian Albums Chart and number 69 on the Billboard 200, and was certified platinum in the U.S. by the RIAA in December 2004 and double platinum in Canada by the CRIA.

The release of "I Hate Everything About You" was followed by two more single releases, "Just Like You" and "Home".

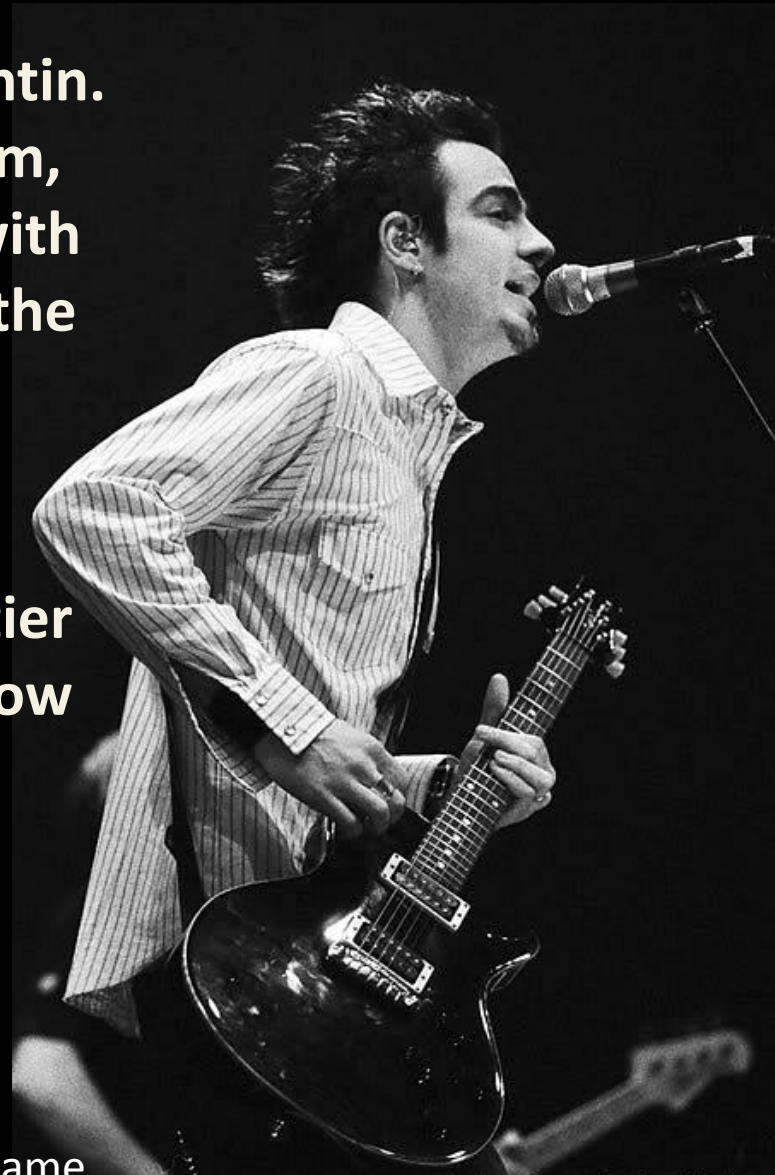

In may 2004, Adam married his high school sweetheart Naomi brewer. Together with his beloved Gontier recorded several songs, including such tracks as "Try To Catch Up With The World" and "Lost Your Shot".

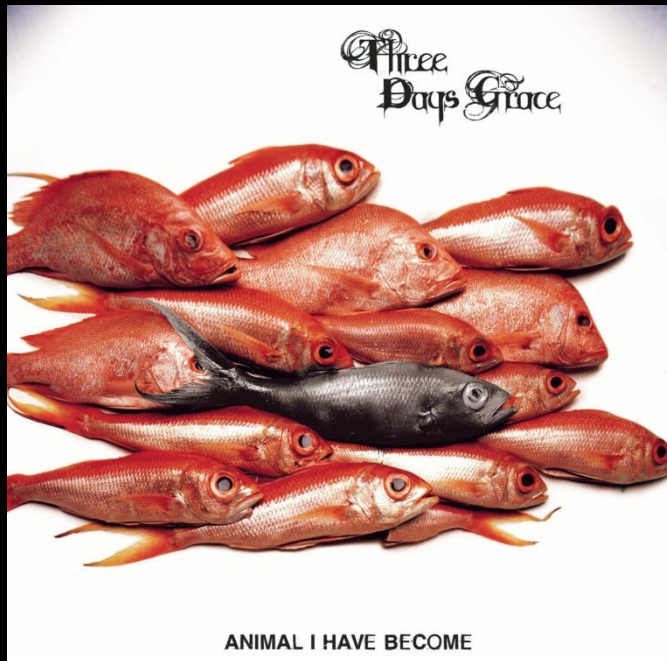

About this time, Gontier developed an addiction to the prescription drug OxyContin. After finishing the tour for their first album, the band knew they could not continue with the condition he was in, so in 2005, with the support of his family, friends and band members, Gontier checked himself into the Centre for Addiction and Mental Health (CAMH). While in treatment, Gontier began writing lyrics for songs regarding how he felt and what he was going through in rehabilitation.

«A few of us got really carried away, especially myself. I became somebody I didn't want to be.»

-Gontier's regrets about the person he became during the Three Days Grace tour

Gontier successfully completed treatment at CAMH. The band found a place suitable for further songwriting in Northern Ontario, in a cottage. After three months they had about finished what would be on their second album. Gontier contributed lyrics about his experiences in rehab; the first single from titled _____, features lyrics Gontier had written while getting sober.

I can't escape myself
So many times I've lied
But there's still rage inside
Somebody get me through this nightmare
I can't control myself.

-the words of the song

One-X (2006–2008)

In a 2006 interview, Gontier said that the album's material was more personal to him than the band's previous work because the material had come out of his experiences with despondence, drug abuse, and rehab, which had constituted the past two years of his life.

The album was released on June 13, 2006, (It was guitarist Barry Stock's record debut.)

Gontier also performed live by himself at various rehabilitation centres as a "thank you" to the people who helped him get through his addiction, and as an inspiration to others who were also dealing with addiction issues. In these performances, he would play songs such as "Pain", "Animal I Have Become" and "Never Too Late", to encourage and motivate people under treatment to overcome their addiction.

Most, if not all, of these solo acoustic performances, called the "Three Days to Change" tour, took place simultaneously as Three Days Grace toured promoting One-X. In November 2006, Adam performed with the band at a special show at the CAMH in Toronto, where he had gone for his own rehab.

Three Days Grace

One-X peaked at number two on the Canadian album chart and at number five on the Billboard 200, selling 78,000 copies in the U.S. in its first week of release. "Animal I Have Become" was Three Days Grace's most successful single, becoming 2006's most played rock song in Canada. The album helped Three Days Grace to become the number one rock artist in airplay in the U.S. and Canada in 2007, with Billboard ranking them as the number one rock artist of 2007. One-X was certified triple platinum by the RIAA in the U.S. on March 4, 2016, and double platinum by the CRIA in Canada in July 2007. Three Days Grace toured the U.S. and Canada throughout the second half of 2006 and all of 2007 in support of One-X.

From March to August 2008, and from January to April 2009, Three Days Grace recorded their third album at The Warehouse Studio in Vancouver, British Columbia, and in Los Angeles, again with producer Howard Benson who had worked with them on their previous releases.

Life Starts Now (2009–2011)

The album, entitled Life Starts Now, was released on September 22, 2009. Critics as well as band members have noted the album's departure from the angry tone of the band's previous releases into a lyrical style that is perceived as more optimistic.

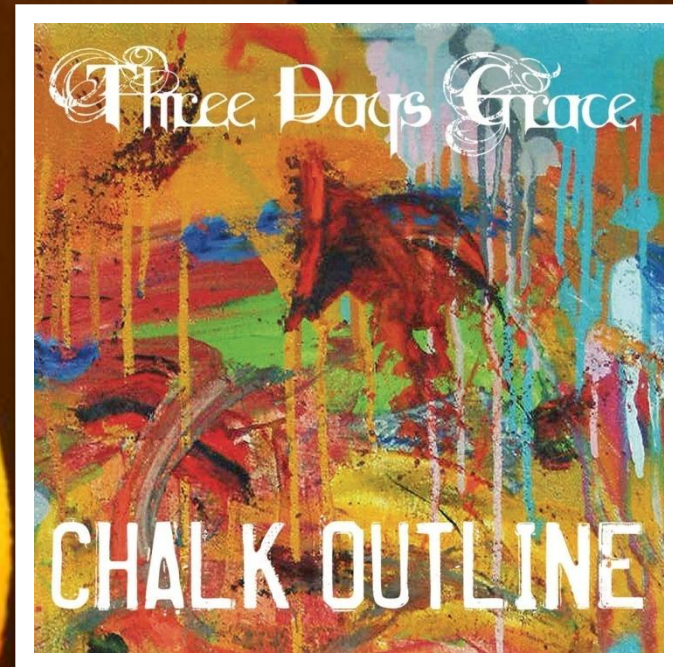

Life Starts Now debuted at number three on the Billboard 200, Three Days Grace's highest chart position to date, and sold 79,000 copies in its first week. The first single release from the album, Life Starts Now, was released on September 1, 2009.

Three Days Grace (2009)

On June 5, 2012, the same day as Venus' visible transit across the sun, the band announced that their fourth studio album would be called Transit of Venus which was set to be released October 2, 2012.

Due to the rarity of this occurrence, they created the slogan, "Some things will never happen again in your lifetime", reflecting both this uncommon occurrence as well as the mood that the lyrics and music would most likely take on. The first single from the album, , was released on August 14.
