The Australian Capital Territory (ACT; known as the Federal Capital Territory until 1938) is Australia's federal district, located in the south-east of the country and enclaved within the state of New South Wales. It contains Canberra, the capital city of Australia.

Geographically, the territory is bounded by the Goulburn-Cooma railway line in the east, the watershed of Naas Creek in the south, the watershed of the Cotter River in the west, and the watershed of the Molonglo River in the north-east.

There is situated Namadgi National Park. Namadgi National Park is a protected area in the south-west of the Australian Capital Territory. The national park protects part of the northern end of the Australian Alps with its spectacular granite mountains.
