The role of Twitter in Science Publication and Communication

Based on the work of Emily S. Darling, David Shiftman, Isabelle M. Côté, & Joshua A. Drew*

A survey of 116 marine scientists actively using Twitter highlighted the value of this social networking and microblogging site to science and scientists.

*Infographic compiled using data from Darling et al, 2013, PeerJ PrePrints before publication in Ideas in Ecology and Evolution, and references therein, by KatiePhD.com.

Travel Grants

You will find below general information about IBRO International Travel Grants. If you are interested in applying, please click here to access currently open applications.

IBRO International Travel Grants

IBRO International Travel Grants aim to foster neuroscience research, especially in less well-funded countries, by providing support to high-quality neuroscientists from diverse geographic and scientific areas (US/Canada Region excluded), who wish to participate in international neuroscience meetings. Calls for applications are made twice per year (February and August).

Priority is given to those applicants who have not obtained an IBRO International Travel Grant or an IBRO/SfN Travel grant within the past three years.

Школа по когнитивной науке — TCTS GRADSCHOOL — 24–26 апреля, Санкт-Петербург

Друзья!

Наступает весна, когнитивисты оттаивают. Времена их реакций стремительно увеличиваются, саккады опускаются все дальше от целей, все чаще их беспокоят невызванные потенциалы и тщетно они ждут гемодинамического ответа...

Специально для требующих интеллектуальной подзарядки аспирантов мы решили провести небольшую школу — TCTS GRADSCHOOL, которая пройдет 24–26 апреля в Санкт-Петербурге.
