ОЗНАКОМИТЕЛЬНЫЙ

1. The majority of Americans - about 85 per cent - are neither wealthy nor poor. They belong to the middle class. They own their own cars, spend some time each year on holiday and can pay for a university education for their children.

2. Most Americans are troubled by the fact that the poverty exists in their land. The U.S. is known as a free enterprise economy in which everyone can find a job at which he or she can earn enough money to live. However, it is not easy to find employment for which they are suited. The percentage of the population unemployed varies with the economic conditions.

3. In addition to federal programs, there are programs in each state, which are designed to help people. Some of the money which are given to those whose income is too low to provide necessities such as food, clothing and shelter is distributed free to the poor.

4. There are many other government programs that provide help to people. The Social Security program provides help to people who reach retirement age or if, for example, a worker becomes disabled and cannot work. Older Americans who are not covered by this program does not pay all medical expenses, it does help a great deal.
