

EVERY YEAR PEOPLE CUT DOWN MORE TREES

The image shows a world map with the Azores archipelago highlighted in red. A red arrow points to the Azores, which is labeled 'Азорские острова' (Azores Islands). The map includes labels for various countries and regions, such as 'АТЛАНТИЧЕСКИЙ ОКЕАН' (Atlantic Ocean), 'ЕВРОПА' (Europe), 'АЗИЯ' (Asia), 'АФРИКА' (Africa), 'АМЕРИКА' (America), 'АВСТРАЛИЯ' (Australia), and 'АНТАРКТИКА' (Antarctica). The Azores are located in the North Atlantic Ocean, west of mainland Europe.

A misty, blue-toned landscape. In the foreground, a large, dark, fallen tree trunk lies horizontally across the frame. To the left, a small evergreen tree stands on a hill. In the background, several mountain ranges are visible, covered in dense evergreen forests. The sky is a pale blue with a bright, hazy sun or moon in the upper center. The overall mood is somber and atmospheric.

PEOPLE CUT THE TREE DOWN
BECAUSE THEY NEED WOOD AND PAPER OR NEW PLACES AND HOUSES.