Introduction

The gradual retreat of marriage

Couples are marrying at late

Growing numbers of couples are

Codivorce real unions have increasingly replaced marriage among younger people en

The proportion of married people has declined rapidly, especially among men and women under age 30.

Proportion of women and men married at ages 20 – 30 in selected countries of Europe

The rise of cohabitation and the diversity of cohabiting unions

The character and stability of cohabitation vary greatly between individuals, between countries, and over time.

Co-habitation may eventually become a 'marriage-like' relationship, it is still not a complete substitute for marriage

The declining importance of marriage for childbearing and child rearing
