

When people think of Britain, they often think of ...

The United Kingdom of Great Britain and Northern Ireland

The United Kingdom (UK) is a Constitutional Monarchy

It is made up of 4 semi-autonomous countries: England, Scotland, Northern Ireland and Wales.

The latter 3 have devolved authorities responsible for some regulation and policy making.

The UK covers an area of 242,500 square kilometres and has a population of about 60 million, similar to that of France and Italy.

Population: 60,776,238 (July 2007 est.)

The current name of the country, the United Kingdom of Great Britain and Northern Ireland, was adopted in 1927

The Anglo-Irish treaty of 1921 formalised a partition of Ireland; 6 northern Irish counties remained part of the United Kingdom as Northern Ireland

Scotland was an independent nation until the Act of Union in 1707 when England and Scotland joined to form Great Britain

England has existed as a unified entity since the 10th century.

The legislative union of Great Britain and Ireland was implemented in 1801, with the adoption of the name the United Kingdom of Great Britain and Ireland

The union between England and Wales, begun in 1284 but was not formalised until 1536.

Population (mid-2005)

In mid-2005 the UK was home to 60.2 million people, of which 50.4 million lived in England.

The average age was 38.8 years, an increase on 1971 when it was 34.1 years.

Approximately one in 5 people were under 16 and one in 6 people were 65 or over.

The UK population is growing (0.275%). Until the mid-1990s this growth was mainly due to the number of births exceeding deaths. While natural change has continued, since the late 1990s net international migration into the UK from abroad has been an increasingly important factor

Religion

Christianity is the main religion in Britain

There were 41 million Christians in 2001, making up almost three quarters of the population (72%).

This includes Church of England, Church of Scotland, Church in Wales, Catholic, Protestant and all other Christian denominations.

People with no religion form the second largest group, comprising 15% of the population.

About one in 20 (5%) of the population belongs to a non-Christian religious denomination.

This includes almost 1.6 million Muslims and 600,000 Hindus

These “Minority” religious groups were concentrated in London

2005 Eurobarometer report showed that 62% did not believe in a god.

Politics

The UK is a long-established parliamentary democracy with a constitutional monarch as Head of State. The democracy is sustained by free elections, freedom of speech and open and equal treatment before the law.

The Parliament is made up of :
the Sovereign (Queen Elizabeth II),
the House of Lords (the upper house)
and the House of Commons (the lower house).

The House of Lords consists of approximately:
500 life peers, 92 hereditary peers and 26 clergy.

Elections are held as vacancies in the hereditary peerage arise.

Politics

Today the House of Commons is the dominant branch. The House of Commons is democratically elected body of 646 “Members of Parliament” or MPs.

MPs are elected by the first-past-the-post system of election and hold office until Parliament is dissolved (a maximum of 5 years).

Each MP is elected by and represents an electoral district known as a constituency. Elections were last held in May 2005.

Sittings of the house are open to the public and debates are broadcast on the radio and television.
