Style

- Fashion is a general term for a popular style or practice, especially in clothing, footwear, accessories, makeup, or furniture. "Fashion" refers to a distinctive; however, often-habitual trend in a look and dress up of a person, as well as to prevailing styles in behavior. "Fashion" usually is the newest creations made by designers and are bought by only a few number of people; however, often those "fashions" are translated into more established trends.

Fashion industry

- The fashion industry is a product of the modern age. Prior to the mid-19th century, most clothing was custom made made. It was handmade for individuals, either as home production or on order from dressmakers and tailors. By the beginning of the 20th century—with the rise of new technologies such as the sewing machine, the rise of global capitalism and the development of the factory system of production, and the proliferation of retail outlets such as department stores—clothing had increasingly come to be mass-produced in standard sizes and sold at fixed prices. Although the fashion industry developed first in Europe and America, today it is an international and highly globalized industry, with clothing often designed in one country, manufactured in another, and sold world-wide. For example, an American fashion company might source fabric in China and have the clothes manufactured in Vietnam, finished in Italy, and shipped to a warehouse in the United States for distribution to retail outlets internationally.

Fashion industry

- The fashion industry has long been one of the largest employers in the United States, and it remains so in the 21st century. However, employment declined considerably as production increasingly moved overseas, especially to China. Because data on the fashion industry typically are reported for national economies and expressed in terms of the industry's many separate sectors, aggregate figures for world production of textiles and clothing are difficult to obtain. However, by any measure, the industry accounts for a significant share of world economic output.
- The fashion industry consists of four levels: the production of raw materials, principally fibres and textiles but also leather and fur; the production of fashion goods by designers, manufacturers, contractors, and others; retail sales; and various forms of advertising and promotion. These levels consist of many separate but interdependent sectors, all of which are devoted to the goal of satisfying consumer demand for apparel under conditions that enable participants in the industry to operate at a profit.

The Day Before

that urban areas are being transformed into an idealized, nostalgic vision of the past, driven by too many different and conflicting interests for which the city has no room. The result is a cityscape that has been shaped over decades, while the urban landscape is being transformed into a non-urban, regressive investment. For these reasons, rational and conciliatory proposals quickly become empty phrases. In a situation where we witness the intellectual and moral erosion of institutional policy and the crisis of the urban infrastructure, it is not surprising that the city is being transformed into a non-urban, regressive investment.

In contrast, it is often argued that the blatant theft of new ideas, unique designs, and design details by larger companies is what often contributes to the failure of many smaller or independent

Lady Gaga's controversial meat dress

- This isn't a joke. Lady Gaga's controversial meat dress that she wore to the MTV Video Music Awards is being turned into beef jerky!
- Franc Fernandez, the designer of the meaty piece says:
- "The dress will go through a process where it becomes a sort of 'jerky.'
- But never fear, it will not be available to eat it will be "archived" for posterity. Fernandez says that he bought 50 pounds of meat and designed the dress over three days, refrigerating it in between sessions. Over time, the metamorphosis into jerky is natural. "The meat dries out, rather than rotting. But it shouldn't be worn again."
- He also adds he's not planning on designing another one:
- "There's not going to be meat dresses in the future. This was made for a specific purpose. It's what it is."
