

Speaker..

Speaker...

- President of the House of Commons is the Speaker . He is elected from among the oldest and most respected of its members at the beginning of the new parliament , or upon an appropriate vacancy.

Vice-Speaker of the House of Commons

---

Speaker...

- Speaker 's candidacy should be coordinated leaders of political parties represented in the House , and approved by the monarch. If the speaker remembers the MP after the next parliamentary elections, the deputies re-elected him for another term

Speaker...

- The main task of the speaker is , first, to the interoperability of the monarch of the House of Commons , the government and other institutions of government , and second - in the implementation of organizational leadership Chamber.

Speaker...

- Thus , the speaker determines the order of the MPs and sees to it that they spoke on the merits, controls the course of the debate , and apply disciplinary measures against violators of the order , select a committee that will work on the draft law , and appoints its chairman , determines whether the bill to number of financial and decides to hold a meeting of the Committee of the whole House , confirms overcoming the veto of the House of Lords , etc. Thus , the speaker plays an important role in the work of Parliament.

Photo...

Speaker...

- Thus , the speaker plays an important role in the work of Parliament. With this in mind , and in order to prevent the benefits of the party to which the speaker , immediately after the election he formally leaves its composition. To prevent pressure on the Speaker to MPs during the debate , he, like his deputies are not afforded the right to speak at meetings of the Chamber and participate in the voting. The exception is when the deputies' votes are equally divided .

Photo..

