Shrovetide

- People celebrate this holiday in February or in March. It lasts for a week. Each day of the week has its name. And it's very interesting. All week long people bake blini and invite guests to treat them. Blini are the symbol of the sun, perhaps, because of their round form, or because of their yellow colour.
- Shrovetide shows that winter comes to an end and spring knocks at the door.

How it all started

People of Russia celebrated Shrovetide widely. There was a program of celebrating which suggested a lot of activities. Children and grown-ups could:

- Roll down hills,
- Climb a poll,
- Build townlet,
- Ride troika
- Burn a figure of a winter,
- Set fireworks,
- Eat blini .

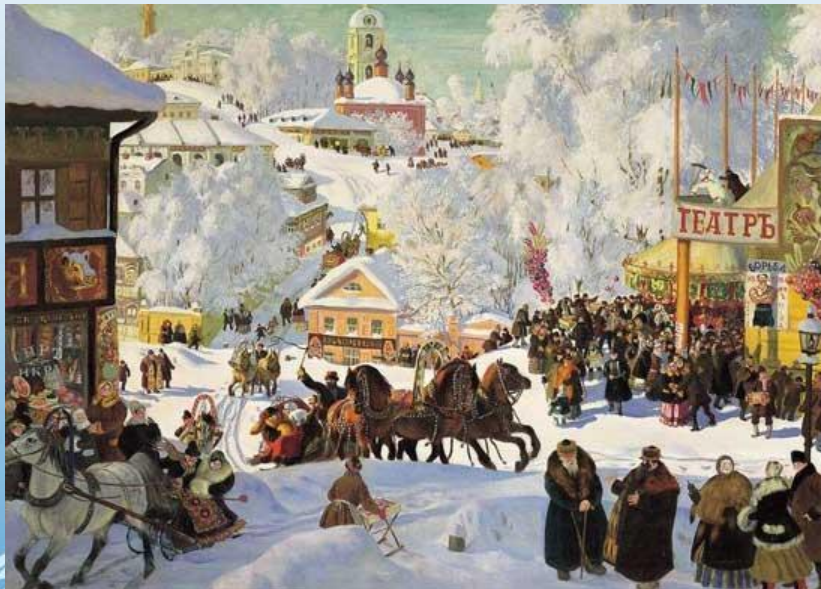

Nowadays

We tried to find out if people celebrate Shrovetide this way nowadays.

Our observations:

- All our grandparents took part in Shrovetide celebrations.
- Nobody of our parents took part in funny program of the holiday.
- We know about the celebrations from books and films.

- The background is a gradient of blue, transitioning from a lighter shade at the top to a darker shade at the bottom. It is decorated with various winter-themed elements. On the left and right sides, there are vertical borders of white and light blue snowflakes of different sizes and shapes, some with intricate patterns. Interspersed among the snowflakes are stylized white and light blue winter motifs, including what appear to be snow globes or circular frames containing snowflakes, and other abstract shapes. The overall aesthetic is clean and festive.
- Shrovetide brings new hopes.
 - It introduces new season.

Conclusion

There is a tendency today to give Shrovetide the second birth. And we see positive experience. In some places people follow the old traditions by setting bonfires, riding troika, building snowtowers, burning a figure of winter.

We hope that we will take part in such activities in future.
