Alexis de Tocqueville's Democracy in America (1835-1840)

- A systematic study of the links between democracy and civil society
- democracy could exist only by seeking a moral support in religion, and that religion could only prosper by accommodating itself to democracy
- the Americans' inclination for civic association impressed as the key to their unprecedented ability to make democracy work.

Effectiveness of the regional governments

- Voter turnout; newspaper readership; membership in choral societies and football clubs, etc.
- "social capital" refers to features of social organization such as networks, norms, and social trust that facilitate coordination and cooperation for mutual benefit

Society

- Church-related groups - the most common type of organization joined by Americans, especially popular with women.
- Women: school-service groups (mostly parent-teacher associations), sports groups, professional societies, and literary societies.
- Men: sports clubs, labor unions, professional societies, fraternal groups, veterans' groups, and service clubs.

Religion

- Religious affiliation - the most common associational membership among Americans. America continues to be a "churched" society: the U.S. - more houses of worship per capita than any other nation on Earth. Religious sentiment seems to be less tied to institutions and more self-defined.

Dominant and minority groups

- Dominant groups use their power to manipulate minority groups using better organization, equipment, access to superior technologies.
- Authority is the power that becomes legitimated.
- Dominant groups dominate the institutional structure of the society (political system, economic system and cultural values of the society).
- Dominant groups control access to the opportunity structure of the society.

Minority group

- Numbers: they are fewer in the society. Sometimes they are majority in population (Afro-Americans, women).
- They are held up in power – relative powerlessness. Black movements resulted ultimately in success, Hispanics movements now have a different character.
- Lack of access to the institutional structure of the society.

Minority Group

- Lack of access to money, high-status position and reward system.
- African-Americans earn 60% of what Whites earn; women earn 75% of what men can earn.
- Women neuro-surgeons earn 55% of men in the same position. Black physician earns 60% of white physician.

Minority Group

- Cultural values. Minority culture is seen as inferior, but in many cases white majority tries to acquire music, fashion, eating habits, etc. from minorities. Cultural theft. The only unique musical contribution of America – jazz – started from black music. But dominant group determines the reality.

Prejudice and discrimination

- Racism – is institutionalized discrimination based on physical differences between minority and dominant groups.
- Racist ideologies provide a moral justification for maintaining the society that routinely deprives a group of its rights and privileges.
- Racist beliefs relieve the dominant group of responsibility to address the economic and educational problems faced by subordinate groups.

Prejudice and Discrimination

- Prejudice – a negative attitude toward an entire category of people. Prejudice involves attitudes, thoughts, beliefs, not actions.
- Prejudice → categorical rejection.
- Discrimination involves behavior that excludes all members of a group from certain rights, opportunities, or privileges. It is categorical. It is action.

Prejudice and Stereotypes

- Prejudice is learned. Awareness begins at an early age.
- The content of prejudice: stereotypes.
- Stereotypes are unreliable generalizations about all members of a group that do not take individual differences into account.
- Trends in stereotypes – labeling of individuals

Prejudice

- Reducing prejudice:
- Mass media and education
- Equal-status intergroup contact. Key factor – presence of a common goal.
- Corporate image – diversity training: reputation of a business unfriendly to people of color or women results in fewer clients and discourages qualified people from applying for jobs.
