■ Central Park, New York City

■ These skyscrapers border Central Park, in midtown Manhattan, New York City. The park provides one of the few remaining green spaces in the city's dense urban landscape. It is a popular location for outdoor concerts and athletic events, including competitive foot races and recreational softball.

■ Saratoga Springs

■ One of the main summer attractions at Saratoga Springs in eastern New York is horse racing. The Saratoga Race Course, completed in 1864, is the country's oldest thoroughbred racetrack still in use.

■ State Capitol, New York

■ Albany became the capital of New York in 1797, succeeding Kingston, Poughkeepsie, and New York City. The State Capitol, completed in 1899, sits at one end of the city's modern Empire State Plaza. A succession of architects contributed to the building's 32-year construction project, and the result shows an interesting amalgam of French, Italian, and Romanesque influences
