

THE OLD MIDDLE CLASS

PETITE COMMODITY PRODUCTION

- It is a form of production in which:
-  the producer has ownership or de facto possession of the means of production;
-  the goods or services produced are commodities (that is, sold through the market);
-  the producer does not systematically hire wage workers, but may use unpaid family labour;
-  the scale of production is small and there little capital accumulation.

PROLETARIZATION

- This label is applied to the process by which sections of the middle class become absorbed in the working class. K.Marx and F.Engels predicted that small producers and self-employed artisans would gradually disappear.

THE STRUCTURE OF THE OLD MIDDLE CLASS

- Petite bourgeoisie.
- Independent professionals.

THE PETITE BOURGEOISIE

- It is a distinctive form of social organization in which petty productive property is mixed with family labour.
- Classical types:

Small shopkeepers.

Self-employed artisans.

Farmers.
