Besides London there are many more places of interest in Britain which are worth seeing.

Stratford-upon-Avon

- is probably the second most visited town in England.
- The top attraction is the house in Henley Street where Shakespeare was born.
- In the Holy Trinity Church tourists can see the grave of Shakespeare and his family.
- Not far you can find the Royal Shakespeare Theatre and the Swan Theatre.
- The centre of the town is full of magnificent half-timbered medieval houses.

Oxford

- is the oldest university in Europe together with Cambridge, dating back to the 12th and 13th centuries.
 - There are 35 colleges at Oxford.
 - Nearly all the colleges consist of several buildings grouped in quadrangles around open areas of grass and beautiful gardens.

Cambridge

- There are 23 colleges at Cambridge.
 - There are often beautiful gardens adjoining the buildings.
 - Cambridge has remained quieter than Oxford, which has a lot of industries now.

York

- is the residence of a superb Gothic cathedral called York Minster; it boasts impressive medieval stained glass, particularly the beautiful Gothic windows known as the Five Sisters.
 - We can find there also a university.

University of York

Edinburgh

- is the capital of Scotland.
 - It holds an annual Festival of Music and Drama.
 - The oldest building is the Castle standing on a hill in the centre of the city.
 - It is linked by the Royal Mile with the Palace of Holyroodhouse, the British sovereign's official Scottish residence.
 - Another feature is Princes Street with a well-known monument to Sir Walter Scott (a famous writer) who was born in Edinburgh.

Loch Ness

- is the most famous lake in the Highlands.
 - There have been unconfirmed reports of a Loch Ness monster since the 15th century which brings millions of pounds a year to Scottish tourism.
