

The Second Conditional

"If I met a genie, I would ask for infinite wealth..."

We use the second conditional
when talking about future events that are not likely to happen.

Structure:

- If + Simple Past, + Would + Base Form
- Would + Base Form + If + Simple Past

result	IF	condition
WOULD + base verb		past simple
I would be happy	if	I married Mary.
She would marry Ram	if	he became rich.
Would you be surprised	if	it snowed next July?
What would you do	if	it snowed next July?

If I won a million dollars, I would travel around the world.
(There is a small possibility that I would actually win.)

Dan likes fast cars but he doesn't have one. He doesn't have enough money.

I would be surprised if I saw pigs in the sky.
(It is very unlikely for me to see pigs in the sky.)

We also use the second conditional when talking about things which are contrary to the present facts.

"If I had any money, I would give you some."

- If she worked less, she wouldn't be so tired.
(In reality she doesn't work less, so she is tired.)
- You would see John if you were here now.
(In reality you are not here now, so you don't see John.)
- If things were different, we would be happy.
(In reality things are not different, and we are not happy.)
- We would be good friends if she were nicer.
(In reality she is not nice, and we are not good friends.)

Note:

You can use these modal verbs instead of would:
should, could, might.

Examples:

If she didn't have her job, she could come with us to the North Pole.

If they wanted to move, they could sell the house to us.

Note:

the short form of would is 'd.

For example: If Kathleen were at home, she'd pick up the phone.

The verb BE

The verb BE has a special rule in this case.

Usually we say: I was, he was, she was, it was, we were, you were, they were.

However, in these cases, we use:

I were, he were, she were, it were, we were, you were, they were.

In other words: "were" is the only form.

If I were you I would apologize.
(In reality I am not you.)
