

The United Kingdom
of Great Britain &
Northern Ireland

The National Anthem of the United Kingdom of Great Britain and Northern Ireland.

- God save our gracious Queen,
Long live our noble Queen,
God save the Queen!
Send her victorious,
Happy and glorious,
Long to reign over us,
God save the Queen!

O lord God arise,
Scatter our enemies,
And make them fall!
Confound their politics,
Frustrate their knavish tricks,
On Thee our hopes we fix,
God save us all!

Thy choicest gifts in store,
On her be pleased to pour,
Long may she reign!
May she defend our laws,
And ever give us cause,
To sing with heart and voice,
God save the Queen!

From every latent foe,
From the assassins blow,
God save the Queen!
O'er her thine arm extend,
For Britain's sake defend,
Our mother, prince, and friend,
God save the Queen!

HER MAJESTY THE QUEEN ELIZABETH II.

The political System of the UK

The UK is a constitutional monarchy. This means that it has a monarch (a king or a queen) as its Head of State. The monarch has very little power and can only reign with the support of Parliament.

"SHE REIGNS, BUT DOESN'T RULE"

The political System of the UK

Britain does not have a single document that can be treated as a constitution. That's why they say there is no written constitution in the country. The term "British Constitution" means the leading principles, conventions and laws that are expressed in some documents.

The political System of the UK

The British parliament is one of the oldest representative assemblies in the world. Parliamentary government in the United Kingdom is based on a two-chamber system. The House of Lords (the upper House) and the House of Commons (the lower House) sit separately and are constituted on entirely different principles. The legislative process involves both Houses.

The Constitutional Monarchy

The British Parliament is one of the oldest representative assemblies in the world. Parliamentary government in the UK is based on a two-chamber system.

Parliament

The main functions of the Parliament are to:

- examine proposals for new laws;
- provide the means of carrying on the work of government;
- scrutinize government policy and administration;
- debate the major issues of the day.

Parliament has a maximum duration of five years. At any time up to the end of this period, a general election can be held for a new House of Commons.

The House of Lords

The House of Lords

The House of Lords is the second chamber of the U.K. Houses of Parliament. Members of the House of Lords (known as “peers”) consist of Lords Spiritual and Lords Temporal. Law Lords (senior judges) also sit as Lords Temporal. Originally, they were drawn from the various groups of senior and influential nobility in Britain, who advised the monarch throughout the country’s early history. Following the House of Lords Act 1999 there are only 92 peers who sit by virtue hereditary peerage. The majority of members are now life peers. There are 675 peers in total in 2001.

The House of Lords

In general, the functions of the House of Lords are similar to those of the House of Commons. All bills go through both Houses before becoming Acts, and may start in either House. The House of Lords is also the final Court of Appeal for civil cases and for criminal cases in England, Wales and Northern Ireland.

The Speaker of the House of Lords is the Lord Chancellor.

The Lord Chancellor sits on a special seat called the Woolsack. It was introduced by King Edward III (1327-1377) and originally stuffed with English wool as a reminder of England's traditional source of wealth – the wool trade – and as a sign of prosperity. Today the Woolsack is stuffed with wool from several countries of the Commonwealth, to symbolize unity.

The House of Commons

The House of Commons

The House of Commons is the centre of parliamentary power. It is directly responsible to the electorate, and in the 20th century the House of Lords has recognized the supremacy of the elected chamber. It is the main parliamentary arena for the political battle. Because the House of Commons is elected, unlike the Lords, a party that wins the majority of Commons seats in a general election is called on to form the next government.

House of Commons

646 democratically elected members. (MP) (Members of Parliament)

Each one represents a small area of the UK called “Constituency”.

“Constituency” means districto electoral or circuncripción.

General elections are held at least every five years. Not all Parliaments run for the whole five years, and a general election may be held before this period is up. In between general elections, by-elections are held as necessary to elect a new Member of Parliament. MPs are paid a basic annual salary of £49,822 (from 1 April 2001).

How to become UK Prime Minister?

Who can be an UK Prime Minister?

The leader of the political party with the most M.P. becomes
UK Prime Minister.

What is “Majority”?

When a party has more M.P. than all the other parties put together, it has got Majority. Example:

-  Labour party
-  Conservative party
-  Liberal Democrats party

Members of Parliament

Labour Party has won by a Majority.

The Cabinet of Ministers

- The leader of the winning party in elections automatically becomes Prime Minister and has the right to appoint his Government, called the Cabinet
- The Cabinet includes a selection of MPs
- It works as a team and is collectively responsible for its decisions
- The Cabinet is responsible to Parliament
- The most important ministers are Prime Minister, Chancellor of the Exchequer, Foreign Secretary, Home Secretary

The life of a parliament

The life of a Parliament is divided into sessions. Each usually lasts for one year – normally ending in October or November. There is also a long summer break (“recess”), usually starting in late July and finishing in October.

The British democratic system depends on political parties. The political parties choose candidates in elections. There are sometimes independent candidates, but they are rarely elected. The party which wins the majority of seats forms the Government and its leader usually becomes Prime Minister. The largest minority becomes the Opposition. The Prime Minister chooses about twenty MPs from his or her party to become Cabinet Ministers. Each minister is responsible for a particular area of government, and for a Civil service department.
