KEY TOPICS OR GESTURES TO AVOID IN CONVERSATION

The English enjoy talking about current events, however avoid getting into discussions about politics, particularly relating to Scotland or Northern Ireland.

Refrain from making enquiries regarding a person's occupation, birthplace, religion, or other intrusive personal questions. {The British are, by nature, a reserved race and these are particularly sensitive areas. If asked about your background by an English person, after you have answered, it is perfectly acceptable to ask these same questions.}

Do not make references to the mediocrity of British food, since it has now improved significantly.
