EU Regulatory framework

- Tenets of EU law
 - Establishment of an internal market
 - Free movement of capital
 - Capital markets not exclusive competence, interference subject to principle of subsidiarity

Historical overview

- 1957 Treaty of Rome established the principle of free movement of capital
- This did not bring about any significant law-making in the field of capital markets
- 1966 Segre Report:
 - Significant shortcomings in Member State laws relating to financial sector
 - Need for a EU approach

Historical overview

- Cassis de Dijon judgment (C-262/81): if an instrument was acceptable in one MS then it ought to be considered to be acceptable in another MS
- The principle was expanded to the field of services by Citadel v Cine-Vog Films judgment in 1982
- 1985 Commission issued a White Paper “Completing the Internal Market”

- Hence following requirements
 - The internalizing activity must be performed on an organized and frequent basis in a systematic manner;
 - The activity has a material commercial role for the firm, and is carried on in accordance with non-discretionary rules and procedures;
 - The activity is carried on by personnel, or by means of an automated technical system, assigned to that purpose, irrespective of whether those personnel or that system are used exclusively for that purpose;
 - The activity is available to clients on a regular or continuous basis.

Market definitions

- Reasons for being SI:
 - SI can create a market in a specific financial instrument, create its own business hours and trading rules. Market makers will have to operate through a regulated market and only during the market business hours.
 - SIs can stimulate a market in instruments not listed in the 'local' market'.
