Climate change march

In London today 20000 people took part in protest marches and demonstrations as world leaders were meeting for climate change talks. The event was organized by the Campaign Against Global Warming.

The day started outside the US embassy with poetry reading and speeches. Protestors then marched slowly to Trafalgar Square, carrying banners and shouting slogans.

A group of protesters on bicycles made their way to 10 Downing Street and delivered a letter to the Prime Minister demanding urgent action on climate change.

By there 0,clock in the afternoon Trafalgar was swarming with people and buzzing with activity. There was a carnival atmosphere with music provided by a samba band, a New Orleans jazz band and Scottish pipers.

Most of the protesters marched peacefully, but a small group of people broke a way from peaceful demonstrators. They smashed shop windows and tried to set fire to a supermarket. Five people were arrested.

I think the weather is changeable in Kazakhstan. The Earth is warmed naturally by gases in the atmosphere trapping heat from the Sun. The Earth climate has changed considerably in the past.

- . An increase in global temperature could lead to major problems for mankind
- . Sea levels could rise, flooding low- lying coasts;
- . Different weather patterns could affect agriculture and food production;
- . and forced migrations of people could affect peace and international security.
