Digital Pollution is the cyber junk that gets in the way as you live your life online. Protection and education are the keys to plowing through that junk and getting online freedom. Join the fight! Each month in 2010, Kaspersky Lab will select one form of Digital Pollution, explain the threat in layman's terms, and share tutorials and simple tips for average users.

Every day, there are more than 30,000 brand-new digital threats found, all created with the sole purpose of stealing your financial data, hijacking your identity, deleting your stuff, or generally messing with your happy computing experience. Even on the days you don't encounter Digital Pollution, you still have to WORRY about it...and the last thing we need is more stress in our lives.

In 2010, Kaspersky Lab has made it our mission to take the lead role in helping YOU stay safe from "Digital Pollution" - all the cyberjunk that gets in the way while you live your life online.

Spring Cleaning for your PC – Set your System to Stay Up-to-Date

Keep your system up to date

This week we'd like to offer some very basic advice that goes a long way to protect you from Digital Pollution. Keep your system up to date. It seems like an easy thing to do, yet, very few people remember to do it. Most major companies these days, such as Microsoft and Adobe, offer a monthly security update to protect your applications and your computer.

Windows Vista is less secure than XP: Kaspersky

zdnet.com.au — Security company Kaspersky has said that Windows Vista's User Account Control (UAC), the system of user privileges that restrict users' administrative rights, will be so annoying that users will disable it. "There's a question mark if Vista security has improved, or down," said Kaspersky's chief executive.

I disagree with you that it's not annoying, but that is coming from a programmer/technician viewpoint. I think most people won't be bothered by it because most people don't do things that require the UAC to be in frequent use. +208 diggs

Also, this is coming from a security company. Of course they are going to say it is less secure. If everyone thought Vista was secure enough to not need an antivirus, Kaspersky wouldn't make money :)
