A photograph of a grand, classical building, likely a university hall, featuring a central clock tower with a dome and a weather vane. The building has multiple stories with arched windows and a ground-floor arcade of arches. In the foreground, there is a large, well-maintained lawn with distinct mowed stripes. The sky is blue with scattered white clouds. The text "CAMBRIDGE EXAM" is overlaid in a large, white, serif font across the middle of the image.

2 What wasn't in the toy shop window?

On Wednesday it was James' tenth birthday. In the morning he went to school. His teacher, Mrs Murray, said "Happy Birthday, James!", but his friends didn't. In the playground they didn't play 'catch and throw' with him. James' friends sat under a tree and talked quietly. "What's the matter?", he thought. James kicked a rock because he was sad.

3 When was James' tenth birthday?

4 Where did James' friends sit?

5 Why did James kick a rock? because

After school James walked home. He opened the door. It was very quiet. Then, all his school friends jumped out from behind the sofa. "Happy birthday, James!" they shouted and laughed. His mum brought a beautiful birthday cake and put it on the table. Then, James saw a big box inside a lot of coloured paper. "This is for you," said James' dad. James quickly opened the box. The red and black toy train was inside!
