

A cinematic, golden-hour scene of ancient Babylon. The central focus is the massive ziggurat Etemenanki, which is partially covered in scaffolding, indicating it is under construction or repair. The sun is low on the horizon, creating a warm, orange glow that illuminates the city's architecture and the sky. In the foreground, a river reflects the light, with small boats and figures visible. The city is filled with various structures, including walls, towers, and a large gate. Birds are seen flying in the sky, and a small fire burns on the left. The overall atmosphere is one of grandeur and historical significance.
