

Excite- appealing-astounding

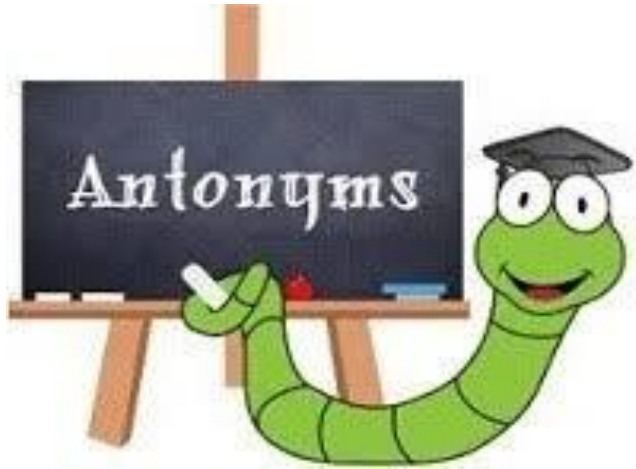

- Unmoved
- Unstimulated
- Dull
- Moderated
- Uninspiring

- ◆ The box was passed from hand to hand, and excited universal admiration.
- ◆ They told me to lie quietly in bed this morning, but I'm not tired, not excited.
- ◆ "It's all right, boys," cried the captain to the excited mob.

Polite-amiable-attentive

- Impolite
- Inattentive
- Lout
- Rude
- Surly

- ◆ I don't call that polite, seeing that I have come back to live with you.
- ◆ I knew I could make something more than a polite sosh out of you.
- ◆ "Sounds like a polite way of saying 'mind your own business.' "

Enhancement-improvement-enrichment

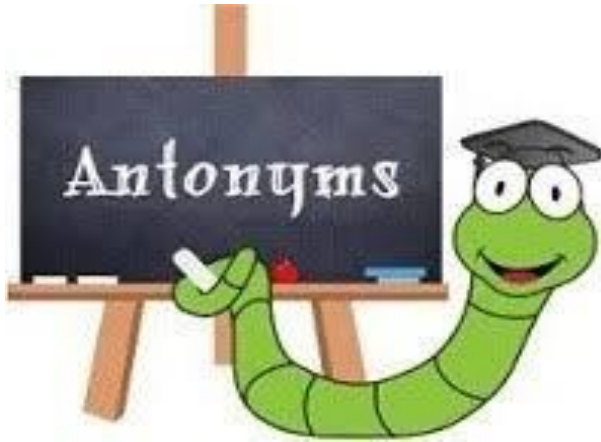

- Injury
- Worsen
- Impoverish
- Reduce
- Undevelopment

- ◆ Human strength increases with enhancement and decreases with enfeeblement.
- ◆ It was a comfort to him in all his vexations, an enhancement of all his joys
- ◆ Truth is merely a means for the enhancement of my subjective satisfaction.

Victim-casualty-fatality

- Culprit
- Attacker
- Assassin
- Criminal
- Victimizer

- ❖ He was not naturally bad, but he had fallen a victim to sudden temptation.
- ❖ "You'll have to cut down your victim before I get there," grinned Chip.
- ❖ You are a strong man; and you are a victim of your strength.

Convince-assure-persuade

- Discourage
- Unsell
- Prevent
- Stop
- Fail

- ◆ But I hope you will convince as well them as me of the contrary.
- ◆ But he was apparently able to convince even Larry la Roche by means of words.
- ◆ A single moment served to convince the youth that he was mistaken.

Thanks for attention

put 5 please