The meaning of life and human goals

- The meaning of life is a person's desire for something that goes beyond his life. it does not give direct returns and often does not correspond to the concept of "egoistic interest". The meaning of life is connected with the assessment of the entire life of a person, or with what will happen after his death . At the same time ,the goal that a person strives for should be perceived by them as something super-valuable , which fills their life with meaning.

The meaning of life and human goals

- The meaning of life, the meaning of being is a philosophical and spiritual problem related to the definition of the ultimate goal of existence, the purpose of humanity, man as a biological species, one of the main worldview concepts that is of great importance for the formation of the spiritual and moral image of the individual.

Concepts of the meaning of life

- The meaning of life can be viewed in three time dimensions: the past(retrospection), the present(actualization), and the future (prospect). The realization of the meaning of life depends on the existence of many conditions in society, the most important of which are the existence of democratic freedoms, humane goals and appropriate means. To determine the meaning of life, there are various approaches that underlie a particular concept.

Concepts of the meaning of life

- Hedonism-to live is to enjoy.
- Eudemonism-life is the pursuit of happiness as the true purpose of man.
- Asceticism-life is renunciation of the world, mortification of the flesh for the sake of atonement for sins.
- Ethics of duty- life is self-sacrifice, altruism in the name of serving the ideal.
- Utilitarianism-to live is to benefit from everything.
- Pragmatism - the goal of life will justify any means of achieving it.

A photograph of a dirt road winding through a forest. The road is light brown and leads into the distance. On either side of the road, there are tall, dry grasses and some evergreen trees. The background shows a line of trees under a pale sky.

The meaning of life is just to be alive. It is so plain and so obvious and so simple. And yet, everybody rushes around in a great panic as if it were necessary to achieve something beyond themselves.
