

Advantages and Disadvantages of communicating on the Internet

Advantages

1. The Internet connects people. The Internet helps us stay in touch with other people. For example, we can use social networks to communicate with friends. We can find new friends through special websites.

2. Self-expression, when you share the result of your creativity (music, drawings, poems, videos).

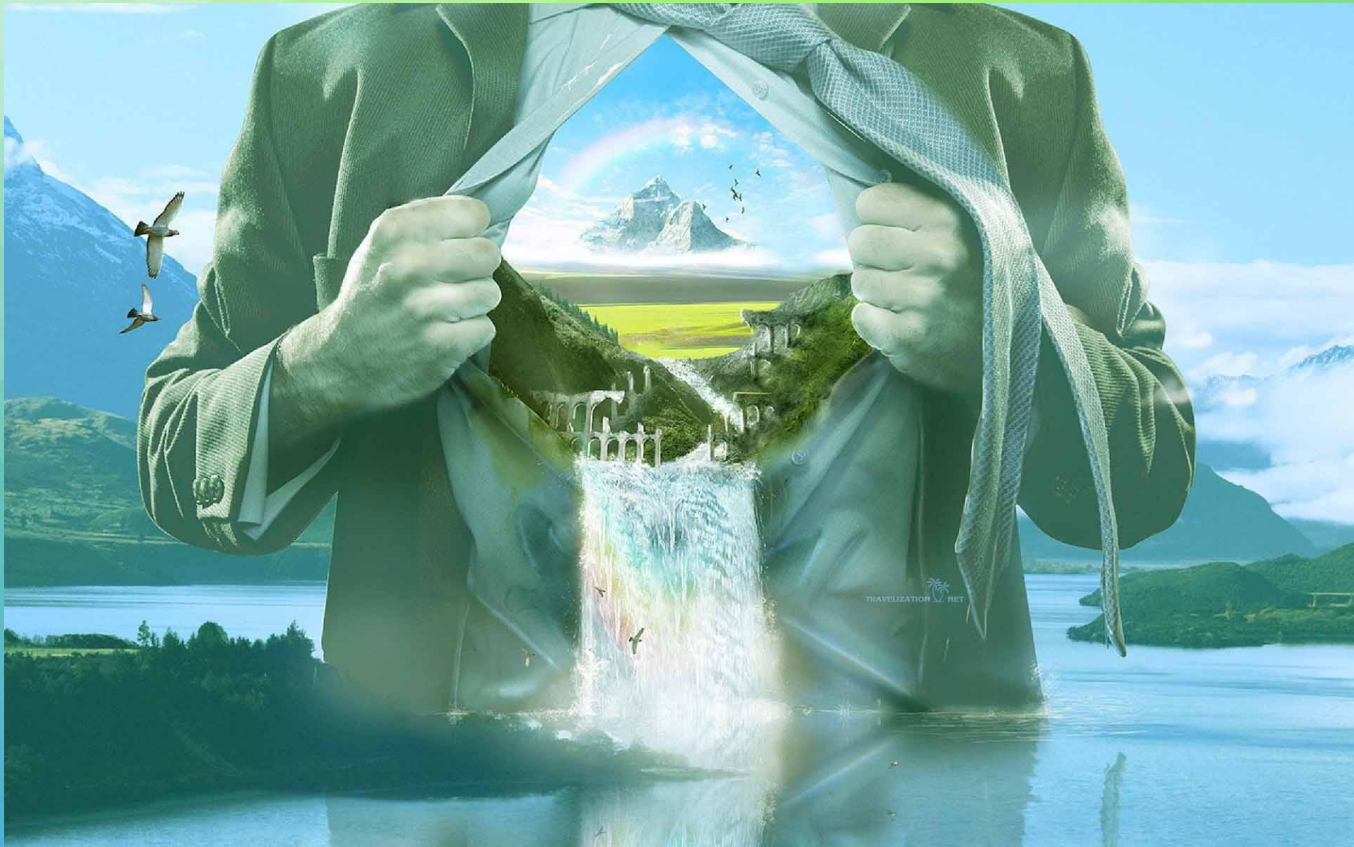

3. You can meet people who share your hobbies and interests, which means sharing opinions, information, and knowledge.

4.-The Internet gives you the opportunity to be what you want to be yourself

- allows you to be more open
- on the Internet a person is more confident

Disadvantages

- 1. One of the biggest disadvantages is that social networking can be a big waste of time. The time you spend interacting online could be put to better use.

- 2. Long distance, no possibility of tactile communication. We often don't see the face of the interlocutor and can't understand his reaction; the lack of live speech.

3. Cyberbullying, blackmail, deception and disappointment. The Internet is not the safest place.

Conclusion

- I think the Internet gives us a lot of opportunities, but it can't replace live communication. Also don't forget about the rules of decency and your safety.
